Referendum a pain for all; may be unavoidable

By PAUL WOLF

WITH THE petition for a referendum on downtown zoning now certified, at least one council member came out with a telling observation.

The referendum, explained Councilman Bob Fischer, is less a question on archane zoning matters than a vote of confidence on the council itself.

"I don't think the city government should be run by referendum," said Fischer, anticipating a bitter spring.

"If it is going to be that way, then I'm not sure we should even have a city council. I feel rather useless up there."

Indeed, should council members feel useless, or should they appreciate recourse offered the citizenry via referendum?

As Fischer suggested, the five elected officials are already supposed to be carrying out the civic will. Even if in some ideal world the referendum would be unnecessary, Carmel's June 8 ballot appears unavoidable.

After all, such a controversial issue is bound to leave large numbers of people unhappy regardless of what the council decides.

The December vote

On Dec. 8, the council voted 3-2 to approve a comprehensive zoning package — an ordinance that authorized the expansion of the central-commercial district and paved the way for a streamlined permit review process.

While many in town saw the council's final product as a sound compromise between residential and business concerns, opponents of the ordinance viewed it as a sellout to commercial interests.

It was the CC zone expansion that prompted Al Eisner and other Carmel residents to circulate the petition. The county elections department, on Thursday, Feb. 4, approved 460 signatures, nearly 60 more than were needed to lock up the June referendum.

CBA offers; Eisner says no

ONE DESCRIBED the format as woefully inadequate; the other was dubbing the event "Everything You Ever Wanted to Know about Commercial Zoning..."

It starts with Al Eisner, the Carmel resident, who led the drive to get a June 8 referendum on downtown zoning. He was asked if he would speak at a Carmel Business Association breakfast forum, and he turned down the offer.

"She (CBA director Toni Jepson) said we would get 10 minutes for each side, and then 10 minutes for questions and answers," Eisner told The Carmel Pine Cone. "We are really not comfortable with that because the issue needs a lot more amplification than 10 minutes."

The banner Jepson was planning on for the event suggested she believes the format will allow for a thorough discussion.

Carmel's Alan Williams has already agreed to speak in opposition to the referendum at the forum tentatively scheduled for the last week in February.

Meanwhile, the CBA is not expected to take an official position on the referendum. The CBA, however, had supported the ordinance when it was in formation.

When the council meets March 2, it will have a choice: It may go forward and schedule the election, or it may repeal the ordinance and renew the search for compromise.

For now, only two of five council members have come out in favor of repeal. Councilwomen Barbara Livingston and Barbara Brooks are hoping Mayor Ken White will decide to become the swing vote.

White hasn't counted himself out. Nor has he committed himself absolutely to the referendum. "I am going to talk to a lot of people and then make a decision," he said.

Nevertheless, it would be a surprise for White to back down on the ordinance he was instrumental in shaping and has since praised.

Unhappy truth

The unhappy truth remains that no one is eagerly looking forward to an acrimonious campaign period.

For starters, the issues involved are

Myriad of congressional candidates surface since Leon Panetta's departure

By PAUL WOLF

THE OFFICIAL filing period hadn't even opened yet when the scramble for Congress began in earnest.

Even before Tuesday, Feb. 9, when the filing period began, some 23 hopefuls had carried away signature-in-lieu forms from the election departments in Monterey or Santa Cruz counties.

Each is hoping to replace Rep. Leon Panetta in the 17th District. Many of the names who've taken out petitions suggest political newcomers, or, arguably, contenders with nary a chance of victory.

The in-lieu petitions allow potential candidates to get on the April 13 primary ballot by collecting 3,000 signatures instead of paying a $1,336 fee — that is, 1 percent of a representative's current annual pay.

In an era of Congress-bashing, why are so many tripping over themselves to enter a maligned institution? The answer may simply be this: opportunity itself.

"People must feel they have an opportunity they didn't have before," said David Yamada, who teaches political science at Monterey Peninsula College. "They must feel it's wide open without Leon, since Leon was so solid."

One man's experience

It hasn't been easy for candidates to run against Panetta. And no one knows that better than Republican Bill McCampbell of Pebble Beach, who claimed

Supervisor says freeway is dead, but debate lingers

By PAUL WOLF

FIFTH DISTRICT Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman has pronounced the Hatton Canyon freeway project dead.

But, the supervisor's new revelations notwithstanding, there is good reason to believe the controversy is far from over.

Strasser Kauffman cited documents containing an array of new policies at the federal and state level. Then she offered an urgent plea: Local agencies must quickly agree on alternative projects now or face losing state and federal funding.

Forty-two million dollars has been earmarked for the controversial four-lane freeway through the canyon.

With members of the media on hand, Strasser Kauffman Wednesday highlighted a number of new developments:

- A Feb. 8 letter from the Army Corps of Engineers, addressed to Strasser Kauffman, suggested it would not be able to issue the necessary permit for the freeway's impact on wetlands.

- A Jan. 5 letter from the California Transportation Commission states that the region may pursue alternative projects and not jeopardize freeway funds. But local decision-makers, naturally, would have to agree on those specific projects. "The commission," the letter states,

KARIN STRASSER KAUFFMAN

"might consider funding a project that could relieve existing traffic conditions without providing capacity for 20 years."

Strasser Kauffman also pointed to more "new information" in the letter — such as a clause stating the commission may assign "state-only" funding to lower cost alternative projects.

- The state's current $8 million to 12 million debt may effectively eliminate high-cost projects. And President Clinton's

Eye on the news

Dear Editor:

I am a long-time Carmel Valley resident who has always kept an eye on the news. I remember what has gone on in the past in our valley.

Imagine my surprise when I saw Bruce Dormody of San Clemente Rancho on television the other night complaining about the unsubstantiated possibility of fertilizer runoff and water quality impacts to the Carmel River from the proposed very low density San Carlos Ranch project. I hope people realize that at the Dormodys operation at San Clemente Rancho most of their almost 100 septic tanks are right beside the San Clemente and Black Rock Creeks which feed directly into our San Clemente Reservoir!

In addition, does anybody remember the environmental disaster that occurred when the Dormodys cut off the top of a mountain to build their airstrip and all the dirt that eroded which silted in the Reservoir? In case you forgot, go look at the huge scar and the silt trail that still exists today. You can clearly see the cut from Cachagua Road at Sky Ranch. My guess is that it is still eroding today and continuing to silt in the reservoir and reduce our water supply.

To hear Bruce Dormody speak of concern for environmental impact with a straight face is unbelievable and hypocritical. I think people should look in their own backyard first before criticizing others.

Thank you for this opportunity to speak my mind.

Dear Editor:

There are letters appearing in local papers lately by well meaning people, for the most part, fed by ideals to "Save Carmel" but also believing untrue stories they have been told.

These letters are written by people who have not attended the many two-and-one-half year city council and planning commission meetings on the zoning issues of Carmel.

Many people with very good intentions signed the petitions to hold an election on

Doug Thompson

Pine Cone names new editor

DOUG THOMPSON, a Carmel native, has been named managing editor of The Carmel Pine Cone.

Thompson, 35, started his new duties this week. A journalism graduate from California State University, Northridge, Thompson most recently was a partner in Thompson/Teele Public Relations in Monterey.

"We're pleased we were able to bring in someone who not only boasts a strong background in journalism, but possesses a keen knowledge of Carmel and the outlying areas," Karen Carlson, general manager, said. "This move serves to fortify our already strong newsroom."

Thompson will serve in both an editorial and reporting capacity.

He graduated from Carmel High School in 1975. His parents, Ralph and Joan Thompson, have been Carmel residents for nearly 50 years.

the zoning of Seventh Avenue. No doubt they were told, just as I was, by Mr. Maredei that the Leidigs wanted to put another T-shirt shop in their new beautiful building. This was told to four other people that I know of. This story could not be further from the truth.

Mr. Leidig was born on this piece of property, on the corner of Seventh and San Carlos 81 years ago. He and his family have paid taxes on this property all these years. They built a gasoline service station on this corner, and operated it for many years for the community of Carmel-by-the-Sea. There had to be many trucks, cars, gasoline trucks coming and going from that corner, over the years. The Leidigs replaced this resident-serving station with a beautiful new modern building, perhaps the best looking in town.

In 1984, the Leidig's property was downzoned to give the Carmel Plaza corner of Ocean and Junipero, three levels of commercial zoning. Where were all you people then, crying about tourist shops now?

After two-and-one-half years, two planning commissions spending many, many hours of study, debate, came up with three versions of zoning, for the city council to study.

The city council listened intently to all the people. All who wrote the petition spoke many times, before the council and planning commission. These bodies of intelligent people very carefully weighed all the ideas presented. Finally, with all the facts before them, they voted 4-to-1 in favor of Seventh Avenue zoning going straight down Seventh, instead of zigzagging through the blocks in a ridiculous fashion. This zig zag line was made to accommodate Carmel Plaza in 1984. There were originally about five people with their mind set on holding this zig zag line. Unmindful of the several lawsuits being planned, they envisioned hundreds of more tourists a day, streaming down Ocean Avenue to beat a track to the Leidig's beautiful building, and the new shops that might carry candy, instead of shoe repairs.

This will not happen, folks. Commercial property owners realize the tourist community cannot prosper with any more T-shirt shops, any more art or jewelry. Carmel has reached the saturation point several years back. Proof—go look at our empty store fronts; these stores that pay taxes of police and fire departments.

A good and fair decision was made when the council voted 4 to 1 to extend the line straight down Seventh. No great swarm of tourist shops, with more tourists are going to take us over.

Everyone has two entirely different pictures. Before you decide Carmel should spend $8,000 to $12,000 to vote on this zone, make sure you are completely informed on both sides and really understand why the council voted as it did.

We had democracy in action, our planning commission and city council studied all issues very carefully for two-and-one-half years. Then, they voted for what they believed was fair to all property owners. A few people cannot accept the fact that not all of their ideas were adopted.

Carmel men cast eyes on congressional seat

*Stephen Henderson
thinks positive, counting on victory*

By PAUL WOLF

IT MAY be the first rule of politics: Think positive.

Carmel's Stephen Henderson has a vision, and it appears just two steps away from becoming reality.

His vision? On June 8 he will be in the runoff for the 17th congressional seat against his Democratic challenger Sam Farr. It will be an Republican upset victory — and a true hometown election between two Carmelites.

His first step is to slowly dig himself out from the politically unknown category. His second step is to win.

The 54-year-old Carmel Woods resident, who runs a management consulting firm that specializes in helping small businesses, has set up the Stephen Henderson for Congress Committee.

Perhaps justifying his sizable optimism, Henderson stressed no other Republican now preparing to wage a campaign, with the possible exception of Bill McCampbell of Pebble Beach, can boast very much name-recognition. McCampbell, of course, lost to Leon Panetta in November.

Common ground

Parties notwithstanding, "The congressional seat is really nonpartisan," Henderson said. "We (Democrats and Republicans) have a great deal of common ground."

At this early stage, he is not about to alienate any portion of the electorate. For starters, he praises Panetta, echoing many of the sentiments expressed by all would-be successors. "He did a wonderful job being fair to the constituents and making sure everyone's interests were fairly treated."

Henderson, nevertheless, sounds some traditional Republican themes. There is, first off, the need to check government intrusion and overregulation. "The representative is supposed to communicate where and how the government structure is bogged down and not supporting the people," he explained.

He described his views on government efficiency as being in concert with the aims of environmental preservation. "Our two biggest industries are agriculture and tourism. Both are totally dependent on the environment. Remember, the tourist's interest in this area is not the shops and stores; it is the environment."

Henderson, who with his wife Susan, has four children, became a Carmel resident in 1974. This is his first crack at political office — but that fact doesn't keep him from foreseeing victory.

*Darrin Smolinski
seeks new vision, running to win*

By PAUL WOLF

WHEN CARMEL'S Darrin Smolinski needed seed money to launch his campaign for Congress, he was both giver and recipient of the first donation: his own 1986 Mustang, which he cashed in for $5,000.

If nothing else, it was a vivid means for Smolinski, 31, to display his seriousness about the 17th District.

"I am running out of a sense of frustration," he said. "And I am a candidate running to win...I will work 16 hours a day, seven days a week."

Smolinski's candidacy will not fall neatly into categories. First of all, he admits his resources don't match the big budgets of the "professional politicians...who are hoping to jump into a bigger pond."

Smolinski is thinking of Monterey County Supervisor Barbara Shipnuck, Assemblyman Sam Farr and Seaside Mayor Lance McClair — who, he explains, take with them more advantages than name-recognition.

The candidate characterizes himself as reform-minded, seeking "a break from the politics of the past" and "a new vision."

Although weary of labels, Smolinski has signed himself on for the campaign as a Republican. "I come from the progressive wing of the Republican party. Besides, the Democrats have not cornered the market on change."

Smolinski is single and lives on Shafter Way, just outside of the city limits. He is one of three managers at the General Store-Forge in the Forest restaurant in Carmel.

DARRIN SMOLINSKI

Political neophyte

He is a self-described "political neophyte" who plans to run a grass-roots campaign. Indeed, the candidate admits he can't wage a strong battle alone. Apparently that won't be necessary: he has a "core of supporters" so far numbering about 50.

Smolinski stresses the need to address the worsening gang and crime problems among the Monterey County's young people, particularly in the Salinas area.

The candidate, who has recently returned to civilian life after nine years in the military, said it will be "the strength of the message" that ushers him into office. Considering the size of the field, the key will be to make sure that message isn't drowned out among all the other voices in the crowd.

Array of congressional candidates makes debate possibilities overwhelming task only 27 percent against the veteran lawmaker last November. McCampbell, having taken out in-lieu forms, is apparently ready to try for the office once again — without his old adversary in the field.

The Monterey County elections office reports 17 people have taken out signature-in-lieu petitions. In Santa Cruz County, the number is six. These reports don't represent everyone who has expressed an interest in filling Panetta's shoes. The names continue to float around. The key date now is March 1, when the filing period closes.

While the primary is April 13, the runoff between the top vote-getters in each party is June 8. (See related story.)

Meanwhile, Assemblyman Sam Farr, a Democrat who represents the 28th District, took out in-lieu forms in Santa Cruz County, even though he is a Carmel resident.

He is considered a favorite, if not the favorite. Two other Carmel area residents — Republicans Stephen Henderson and Darrin Smolinski — have taken the same route. (See profiles in this issue.)

Two dozen

Then there is Martin Vonnegut of Salinas, who has informed the media of his intention to run but not taken official steps. His candidacy would make an even two dozen.

The candidates range from a Santa Cruz County housewife and a Salinas teacher to entrenched local politicians like Monterey County Supervisor Barbara Shipnuck and Seaside Mayor Lance McClair. The party affiliations run the gamut, from Peace and Freedom to Libertarian.

Panetta's departure follows 16 years of

Back-to-back ballots will narrow field

THE PRIMARY-runoff format for this spring's congressional election will be sort of like separating the wheat from the chaff.

The back-to-back ballots may prove particularly useful for the large field of contenders.

The primary ballot is scheduled for April 13, and the runoff for June 8. Because it is expected that no one candidate will garner a majority of votes and become the automatic winner, the runoff ballot will probably be necessary to pick a new representative for the 17th Congressional District.

The runoff will include the names of the highest vote-getters from every party represented in the primary. Therefore, if there is, say, only one candidate from the Peace and Freedom party, that person automatically progresses to the runoff.

The real narrowing down comes from reducing Democrats and Republicans to one apiece. And since Democratic candidates are expected to outnumber Republican candidates decisively, the runoff phase may come as an advantage to Republican contenders — but with so many in the race it couldn't be much.

service. In November, he won a fresh two-year term, only to be nominated in December by President Clinton for the directorship of the Office of Management and Budget. He was later confirmed by the Senate.

"Yes, these are definitely more candidates than usual," said Brad Clarkk, Monterey County registrar. "But it is normal in that when a long-term incumbent opens up a seat, people figure they have more of a chance than they did before."

Observers expect the field to narrow considerably with candidates losing interest, failing to gather support, or running out of money no sooner than they've begun.

The signature-gathering process, explained Yamada, "gives them some ideas of whether they have grass-roots support or not. And some will not. But these numbers are going to make this an interesting race."

Siphoning off votes

Depending on how one looks at it, the straw candidate tactic is either cynical politics or simply business as usual. Nevertheless, Yamada said certain candidates inevitably function to "siphon off" votes from others.

Think of them as "rabbits" in a foot race, distracting other runners or throwing off the pace.

"Bill Monning (an attorney from Salinas) could easily take votes away for Barbara Shipnuck," Yamada said.

If it will be hard enough for the voters to get to know so many candidates, just imagine orchestrating a debate.

"My feeling is that it is obviously overwhelming," said Mayor McClair, who, as a candidate, is looking forward to reasonable debates. "With all these people getting three minutes to talk...that's inadequate."

So it may turn out that confusion, more than apathy or indifference, will characterize the first election after Panetta's long reign.

January rains produce impressive runoff volume

By PAUL WOLF

JANUARY WASN'T a record-breaker after all. And the rainfall numbers are only a fraction above "normal." But who's complaining?

For the Carmel River system at least, the drought is over, and there has even been the grudging official declarations to that effect. At the start of the water year, which began Oct. 1, it was stated that 27,000 acre feet of runoff was needed to end the drought. So far, the flow has achieved a level of 47,000 acre feet.

"This runoff is because of the duration and intensity of last month's rains," said Darby Fuerst, water resources manager for the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District.

With his best example of cautious phrasing, Fuerst said, "We already have had a non-dry year."

There was a certain excitement about the possibilities for January 1993. In all, 12.1 inches of rain fell, compared with the 15.1 record for the month dating back to January 1969. The records go back to 1922.

Rainfall for the water year up to to 8 a.m. Tuesday morning, Feb. 9, is just a shade above normal — 20.48 compared to 20.37. Runoff, Fuerst notes, is usually the more important measure.

intention to make the Environmental Protection Agency a cabinet-level office does not bode well for projects that disrupt wetlands.

With money tight at every level of government, controversial projects are going to have the most trouble, Strasser Kauffman said.

The new outlook means "there may be insurmountable obstacles," she added.

The new developments carry additional weight in light of Strasser Kauffman's long-standing support of a freeway through the canyon, provided it was done sensitively and included satisfactory mitigations.

"I'm just being realistic," she told reporters. "These new policies make it an entirely new ball game."

While Strasser Kauffman sees an entirely new picture, the project coordinator for the Hatton Canyon freeway, Gregg Albright, argues little has changed. Officials at his agency, the state Department of Transportation, may not interpret the documents in Strasser Kauffman fashion.

"The documentation she is referring to is still consistent with what we've been saying all along," Albright said in a Pine Cone telephone interview after Strasser Kauffman's press conference.

Albright said the Army Corps' approval is no more of a concern today than it was months ago. "We are capable of meeting all their (mitigation) requirements," he said. "We believe the permit is obtainable."

Car burglars elude Carmel police

CARMEL-BY-the-Sea has experienced a rash of car burglaries in the past week and a half, according to police.

And the big shame of it all, stressed Sgt. Dan Clark, is that the incidents — seven in all — were preventable.

"People can keep from becoming a victim if they just secure their cars," Clark said. "We are talking about one of the most common types of preventable crimes."

While the past nine or ten days have been bad, he said, it's been an unfortunate year since this time last winter.

Roughly two dozen such car burglaries were reported in 1992.

Of the seven incidents, burglaries took car stereos, cash, flashlights and sporting goods.

"These are crimes of opportunity," Clark said. "They are usually committed by juveniles and transients."

As for the cases at hand, however, there are no suspects.

Clark added: "People should not lull themselves into a false sense of security just because they live in Carmel."

Deadline extended to Feb. 16 for 'Citizen' nominations

THE CARMEL Residence Association has extended its deadline for accepting nominees for Citizen of the Year from Feb. 10 to Feb. 16.

This is the fifth year that the CRA has invited the public to submit nominations for this award. Names and supporting information should be sent to Citizen of the Year Selection Committee, P.O. Box 13, Carmel, CA 93921.

The honoree will be announced at a celebration at 3 p.m., Sunday, Feb. 21, at the Scout House at Mission and 8th Avenue in Carmel.

The event honors people who have made "outstanding contributions to the objectives" of Carmel's Ordinance 96, which spells out that "Carmel is primarily, essentially and predominantly a residential city."

Nominees may include residents in Carmel's sphere of influence.

Referendum stirs controversy

confusing and multi-faceted. The question emerges: How can a complete picture of the issues at hand be conveyed to the average voter either in the ballot booth or before?

Asked whether the referendum was destined to be an unpleasant experience for the community, White said, "That depends. It depends on whether personalities can be kept out, and whether we can focus on the issues and make a decision. If we go to the lowest common denominator, this will be very detrimental."

As always, there are other perspectives. While Fischer, Councilman Phil Coniglio and other supporters of the ordinance are regretful the petition ever got started, others stand behind it as the necessary means of resolving the controversy.

"I think this is a lousy piece of legislation," said Councilwoman Barbara Livingston of the zoning ordinance.

And, of course, there's Eisner.

To him and countless petition-signers, the referendum has at stake the very character of Carmel.

"The voters," he said, "have spoken clearly that they are alarmed over the erosion of the quality of the downtown business district and the steady loss of shops and services that meet the needs of local residents."

One thing is clear: With such important issues at stake, avoiding the referendum would not solve Carmel's downtown zoning mess.

Holding the sale together

Many of our listings come from people who tried to sell their own homes, and who thought they had been successful. All too often, however, "By Owners" learn the hard way that selling their home is easy, but keeping it sold and getting their buyers to the settlement table is another story.

What are some of the pitfalls? First of all, face to face negotiations with a buyer can be hazardous, even if they really want the house. Then there's the paperwork. Stationery store contract forms rarely cover all of the requirements in your city or state regarding taxes or various disclosure laws, and this may create major loopholes allowing buyers with cold feet to back out at the last minute. Once you have come to terms, how can you be sure your buyers will find competent professionals to handle their loan and complete the settlement? What if there are problems with the structural inspection or termites pop out of your woodwork? These are just some of the areas where experience and expertise serve clients every day in completing successful transactions!

CHS students collect blankets for two tribes of Native Americans

By SCOTT BREARTON

JACK ELLENA, a history teacher at Carmel High School, is spearheading a drive to collect blankets for two tribes of Native Americans.

The blanket collection drive will benefit a Sioux tribe living on the Pine Ridge Reservation in South Dakota, and Four-Star Mountain, a Navajo reservation in northern Arizona, according to Ellena.

"This is designed to help the elders of the tribe, most of whom do not have electricity or running water," Ellena said. "That's the focus."

The idea was brought to Ellena's attention by Maemunah Benik, the recently deceased local humanitarian who served as vice-president and board member of the American Overseas Medical Aid Association (AOMAA).

"I've asked teachers to publicize this to their students, and to ask them to bring in blankets for collection," Ellena said.

Ellena is working closely with Martin and Rachel Herrera, a Native American couple who reside in Arroyo Seco. The Herreras are serving as a liaison between CHS volunteers and reservation residents.

This is the third in a series of projects related to the reservations. During the Christmas season, the Herreras also helped organize a toy and clothing drive to benefit needy children of the reservations.

Benik was contacted by the Herreras, and was able to help finance shipping the toys and clothing through her affiliation with the AOMAA, Ellena said.

"Martin is going to see if the Vietnam Veterans of Monterey County will pay for shipping (the blankets)," Ellena added, noting that Herrera is a Vietnam veteran.

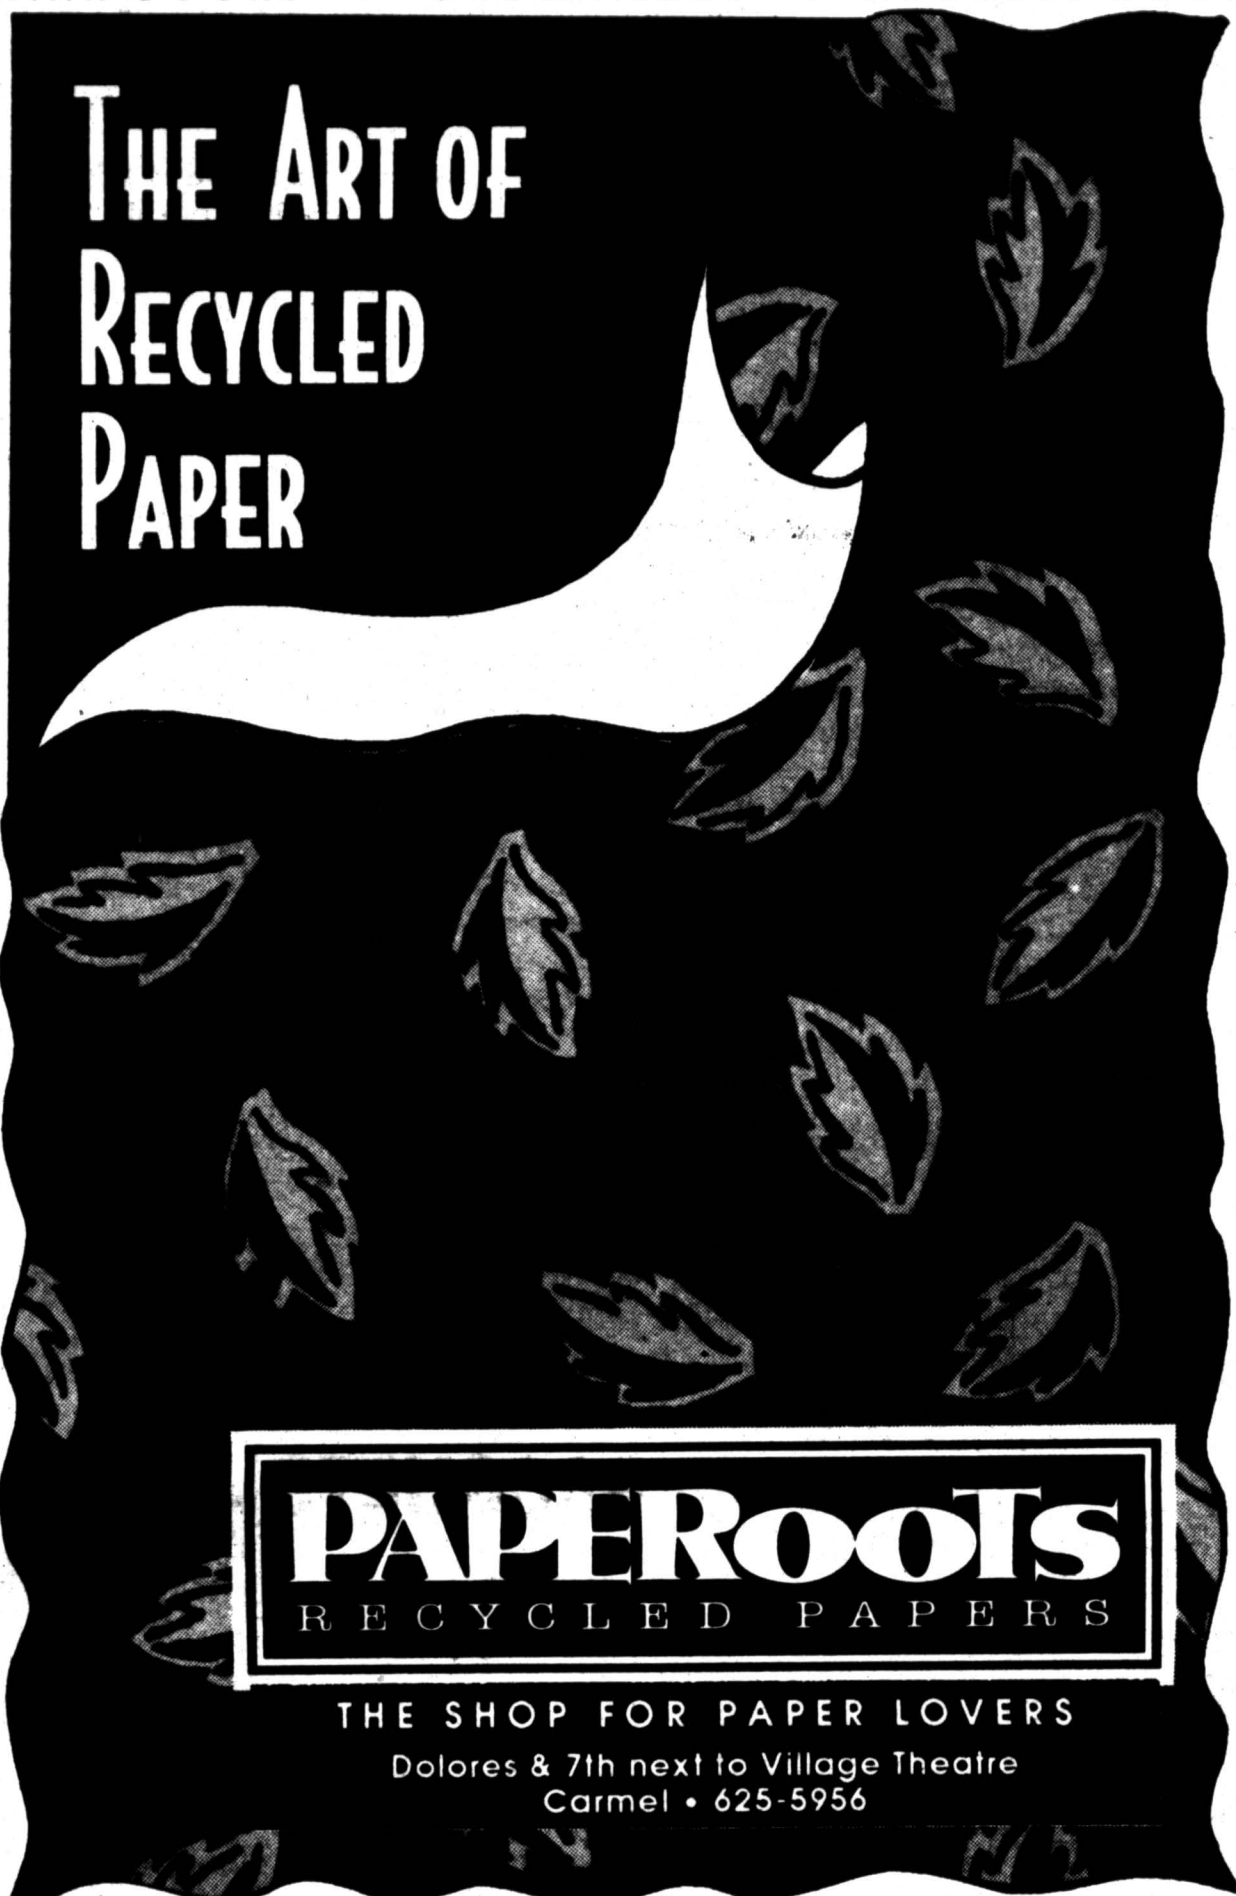

CHS teachers, student volunteers and members of the SMART and Interact Clubs will be leading the blanket drive.

The project, which began Feb. 1, will continue through the end of the month. Additional information can be obtained by calling Ellena at CHS, 624-1821.

'No major problems'

District passes rigorous examination by auditors

By SCOTT BREARTON

A RECENT audit of the Carmel Unified School District showed it ended fiscal year 1991-92 with $1,499,224.

CUSD Budget Director Judy Long explained the $1.5 million figure is made up of specific components: The general fund reserve amount, or money designated for economic uncertainty is $851,580. This is the amount actually available to the district. The remaining $647,644 is part of the district's current year budget, and includes $200,000 set aside by the district for potential repayment of Pebble Beach tax money.

Tom Nelson, of C. Tom Nelson and Associates, a Fresno-based accounting firm, presented the 60-page annual audit report for fiscal year 1991-92 at a board meeting Jan. 28. The board unanimously approved the report as presented.

The report showed the district had expenses totaling $14,682,433 for all funds. Teachers and administrators' salaries made up the bulk of the amount - $6.5 million, with $2.3 million going to other employees of the district. Employee benefits, including health insurance, added another $2.3 million.

Books and supplies cost the district $772,178, with capital outlay - monies used for equipment, buildings, vehicles and site improvements - amounting to $648,089. Other expenses totaled $621,654.

According to Nelson, all public school districts must undergo an annual audit, to verify financial statements and their "receipt of federal and state monies."

Nelson generally characterized the report as standard, with "no major problems." He did, however, note four "findings and recommendations," areas that the district needs to address this year.

"Sound financial position"

"We were pleased to find ourselves in a sound financial position at the end of the year," Long said, "but we are aware that we need to address the rising cost of health care as well as our long-range planning for facilities."

According to Long, the audit report recommended the district:

- Bring attendance procedures for its independent study program into compliance with state guidelines.

- State regulations require that the district's independent study program comply with the provisions of the education code," Long said, "and institute centralized procedures for reporting independent study attendance. It has since been revised to reflect the changes."

- "Review continuation high school attendance accounting and bring the procedures for documentation up to date." Long noted the district has since conducted an inservice training, or internal review process, to address this area.

- Indicate funding sources on their equipment inventory, or fixed asset inventory. For example, items purchased with federal funds or through federal programs should be designated as such on the district's equipment inventory.

"The district needs to keep up to date with state and federal regulations," Long said. "For most districts, federal funding makes up between six to nine percent of total funding. Ours is about six percent."

Area students stage debate this weekend at Carmel High

ABOUT 60 high school students from throughout the Monterey Peninsula will participate in a debate scheduled this weekend at Carmel High School.

Hosted by the Carmel chapter of the Junior State of America, a nationwide high school debate club, the weekend event is expected to draw top speakers from Notre Dame, York, Robert Louis Stevenson, and Monterey High Schools.

CHS Debate Club speakers will include Drew Teti, Jim Rice, Mac Sutherland, and James Genone.

"Carmel is pretty much recognized as one of the best debate chapters in Northern California," Genone said.

The CHS Debate Club will also host a "Mega-Conference" May 1, which will coincide with the annual Spring Carnival.

A flyer distributed to promote the event tells the story: "Do you think Bill Clinton should have inhaled? What will America be like if gays are allowed in the military?"

Carmel Debate Day promises a youthful exchange of ideas on a variety of current topics. The event will take place Saturday morning, Feb. 13, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. at CHS. Follow the signs posted on campus.

Contact Genone at 883-8229 for additional information.

- Maintain a time record for district employees whose salaries are charged to one or more state programs.

- "Some of our employees have salaries that are charged to one or more federal or state programs," Long said. "Auditors want a special log kept to indicate how much time was spent on each particular program."

Nelson noted last year's annual audit report (for fiscal year 1990-91) contained nine findings and recommendations. He said last year's recommendations have been fully implemented.

"This district takes these findings and recommendations seriously and we appreciate that," Nelson said. "This (four) is a very low number."

Nelson described the annual auditing process as an examination of "the internal control that is exercised over the use of federal monies."

"Year-end records are examined to verify financial statements," he said.

According to Nelson, while federal standards generally remain unchanged, state controllers oversee state standards, which change annually.

Other action

In other action, the board heard testimony from Drew Teti, Carmel High School student board representative, who claimed a proposed board policy would give teachers the right to decide whether to allow students to make up assignments missed due to unexcused absences.

The board policy states that "students who miss school because of unexcused absences may be given the opportunity to make up missed work for full or reduced credit."

"Giving this discretion to teachers puts them in a disciplinary role and creates animosity between teachers and students," Teti said. "These are disciplinary measures with academic repercussions."

Teti argued that many students are given unexcused absences due to a technicality, such as being unable to get a note from their parents before the absence is officially recorded as unexcused.

"Any unexcused student should have the full opportunity to make up work for full credit," Teti declared.

Board President Frank Pinney suggested the two issues should be addressed separately. He acknowledged the difference between a technical and flagrant unexcused absence, but questioned the frequency of the problem.

The board seemed to agree that Teti had raised an interesting question: Do teachers have the unconditional right to decide whether or not to allow make-up work, regardless of a student's reason for being absent?

The board will look into the proposed policy more thoroughly, concurring with member Patricia Condren, who said Teti had "opened up a can of worms."

Fort Ord update:

Army wavers on base cleanup

By SCOTT BREARTON

PLANS FOR the reuse of Fort Ord could be delayed for years, according to state Environmental Protection Agency officials who have recommended that Fort Ord fence off 8,000 acres loaded with unexploded ammunition until new technologies are developed to begin cleanup of the affected area.

David Wong, chief of the base closure branch of the state EPA's department of toxic substances control in Sacramento, last week recommended erecting a fence around the entire area, nearly one-third of the 28,000-acre base, after Army officials said they had neither the funds nor the technology to begin cleanup.

"On one hand, you could say it's an accident waiting to happen, but on the other hand, there's really no technology available to clean it up," said Wong.

"The DOD (Department of Defense) is not going to walk away from the problem," Wong continued. "We all have limited resources and technology. We're just trying to bite off a chunk we can all chew. Let's clean up what we can now, with the help that new technologies develop soon."

Even those areas that don't contain unexploded ordnance will need "a couple years" before they can be cleaned up, Wong said.

State officials said existing technology involves the use of "ground penetration radar" to locate buried ammunition, but apparently the radar cannot distinguish between various objects that may be buried there. Therefore, extensive excavation may be required.

Wong said a buffer zone would be included in the fenced area containing unexploded ordnance, to provide more protection in the event of an accident.

"We want to keep a safety zone around the suspected UXO (unexploded ordnance) area, so that the reuse activity will not be jeopardized in any way," Wong said.

According to Wong, red tape is another obstacle.

While the DOD acknowledges its responsibility to clean up areas after a defense site closes, it doesn't consider unexploded ordnance "hazardous waste," and their money can only be used for hazardous waste cleanup.

The state EPA is working closely with their attorneys to find out how unexploded ordnance can be brought into its sphere of influence.

Monterey County Environmental Health Director Walter Wong said former 16th District Representative Leon Panetta introduced bill HR 4016, now a law, that puts the liability for cleanup on the Army.

"By April, 1994, the Federal Environmental Protection Agency and the Department of Defense has to certify which areas are clean and can be parceled off," Walter Wong said.

"The DOD says it will cost about $1 million per acre to clean up," said Walter Wong. "The technology is very primitive. It involves a lot of digging."

Joe Cavanaugh, project coordinator of the Fort Ord Reuse Group, acknowledges that county officials may have to make some changes in their plans.

"We knew all along that the area contained unexploded ordnance," Cavanaugh said. "The difference is that someone outside the Army is saying they're not going to clean it up right away."

"It looks like the Army is trying to save time and money by saying they're not going to clean it up," Cavanaugh continued. "The Army needs to clean up land that they have made unsafe for public use. We are going to ask them to."

Carmel musician dies

SERVICES WILL be held at 2 p.m. Saturday at Carmel's All Saints Episcopal Church for Kevin Feeney, Carmel-based vocalist and contemporary jazz bandleader whose efforts won quite a regional following.

His parents, Carmelites Robert and Anne Feeney, said all who wish to do so may pay respects at that time.

Kevin, also survived by a Pennsylvania sister, died last Sunday. His request was that, following cremation, his ashes be scattered over bay waters near Carmel.

He was born in Nyack, N.Y., on April 6, 1963. He journeyed to this area 12 years ago.

His bands — Zaj and later What's Up — also played soul music and some modernized blues. They were a staple of the Monterey Bay Club when the old Sheraton Hotel booked live music every night.

Carmel Valley residents want Chamber of Commerce to be more involved with local issues

By SUSAN BECK

THE CARMEL Valley Chamber of Commerce is celebrating its 40th anniversary this year.

And this year's board of directors are setting off on a strategy to enhance the organization's objective to promote the civic, cultural, economic, commercial and social welfare of Carmel Valley.

The two immediate goals are to broaden the membership and become more valuable to current and new members.

In his second term as chamber president, Robert Infelise, has a few ideas about future activities.

For example, he favors having the annual Good Egg Awards evening held as a separate event rather than tying it in with the installation dinner.

No substance

But he added those decisions are about symbols not substance.

"We are barely alive financially," said Infelise.

The chamber receives a Transient Occupancy Tax (TOT) grant from Monterey County to promote the hotel industry, but that doesn't address the community's need for commercial growth.

Infelise said he is confident the new board will be able to increase the chamber's now 300 plus membership.

The first plan of action will be to conduct a survey of existing members and member organizations to determine which services and activities they would consider most valuable, least valuable and what changes should be made.

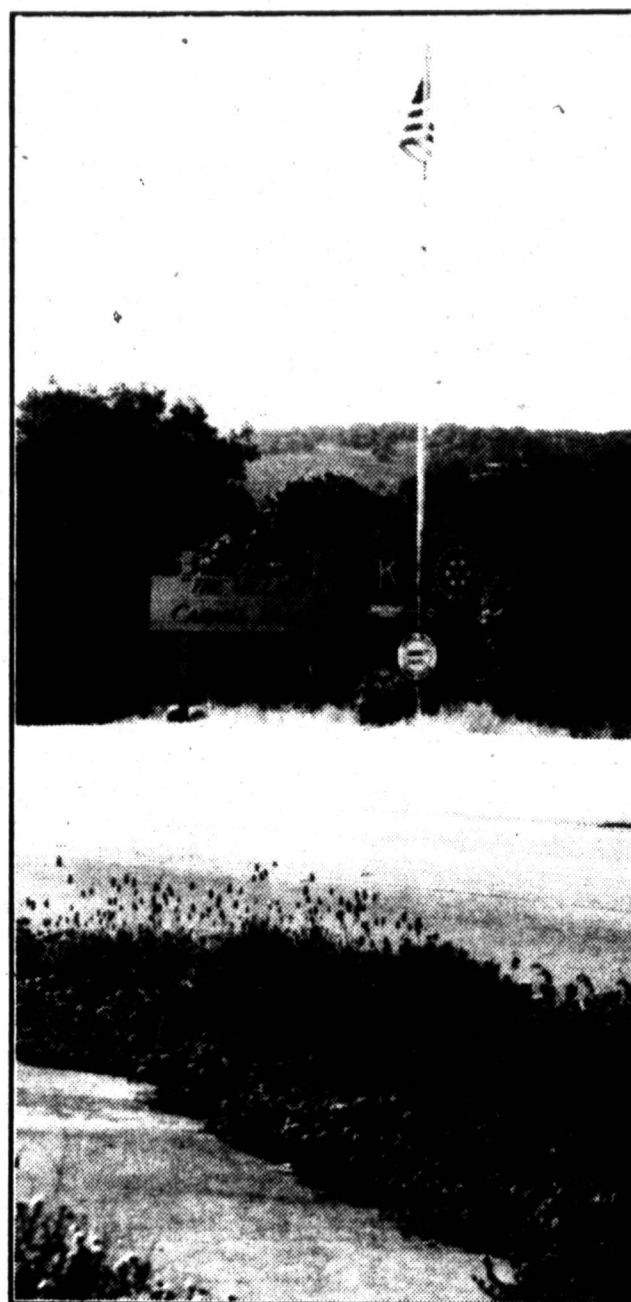

A direct mail survey for non-members will be conducted as well to determine what changes could lead them to seriously consider membership.

Stewart Clough, a Carmel Valley resident and businessman, would like to see the chamber get more involved with small businesses in the village.

"The chamber could use part of the TOT funds to promote shopping locally," said Clough. "The people who run the businesses here are the ones who are involved with the community. If they can't survive, we will lose those resources."

He also thinks the chamber should be an organization that directs people who want to start a business in the village by offering advice as to what the village needs.

"They need to be aware of what's going on," said Clough.

Local Realtor Ilene Crane-Franks has already approached the chamber with a problem she believes they could change.

She said that postal delivery in the village is not extended to businesses. "We were not as busy here before, and could take time to go to the post office. But I don't think that's true any longer. I would like to see the chamber try to get the mail delivered to businesses."

It would be more effective for the chamber to get involved with the community's issues, said Crane-Franks. "Do things that are going to actually help."

Village chamber

Roger Williams also has a business in Carmel Valley. He recalled that the chamber was founded in the village.

But, he said, it was at the time when village activity was starting to slow down. The chamber actually got organized with the development of the Rio Road shopping center and Carmel Rancho Boulevard.

He agrees that the Carmel Valley chamber could do more to emphasize the village.

"I might add that our village has improved its appearance with the help of the Carmel Valley Village Improvement Committee and the local shop owners," said Williams, "and there are many new services available now along with wonderful restaurants and shops."

"I recommend people to come out and take a look. When you come down the hill, turn left for a change."

Jerry Foote

New commissioner seeks balance between land, people

By SUSAN BECK

YESTERDAY WAS Jerry Foote's first day as a member of the Monterey County Planning Commission.

The Carmel Valley resident was appointed to the position for one year to finish out Marit Evans' term.

Monterey County Supervisor Karin Strasser Kauffman chose Foote specifically because of her background in land use.

"It's exciting to plunge into things immediately," said Foote. And indeed she did. One of the first land-use issues to be addressed by the newcomer is Rancho San Carlos.

The ridge of the ranch's 20,000 acres is the majestic backdrop from all points of Foote's home on Miramonte Road in the valley.

"I'm aware of Rancho San Carlos because I look out at its ridge every day," said Foote.

No details

She is also aware of the extensive amount of information, questions and answers that the proposed development project on the ranch has created.

She preferred not to discuss Rancho San Carlos in any detail, but did not diminish the importance of the public's speculation.

"I don't think 20,000 acres can be anything but a big deal," said Foote. "The public participation and grass roots democracy is exciting. I lived in Virginia where there was only one political voice. I never felt as connected as I do in California."

JERRY FOOTE

"The fact that anyone can appear before the commission or the supervisors is a good thing."

The new commissioner's connection to Carmel Valley began in 1970. She and her husband, Edward Potter Foote, drove down Marimonte Road and knew they had to live there.

"I loved the line of the roof on the house," said Foote. "I still wake up every morning and say, 'well, I'm here.'"

She quickly establish herself with a solid background on land-use issues. "You can't be in the 5th District without being aware of land-use policy," said Foote.

As a founding member of the Carmel Valley Master Plan Committee, she became aware of the complexities of balancing the need to maintain the great Western tradition of an individual's property rights and the necessity to impose restrictions for the common good.

"I look for the delicate balance between the love of the land and the people who live on it," said Foote. "Each case is different."

Planning steps

For the last eight years, she has been a member of the Citizens Subdivision Evaluation Committee for Carmel Valley.

She said there are so many planning process steps today that it's shocking for many people.

"Land is very diverse," said Foote, "and development has to match the character of the land. The codes are sitting there and have to be enforced. Sometimes it's hard for the public to understand."

The work involved, she admits, is enormous.

"I have no illusions," said Foote. "I've had the help of the planning commission staff, and the reading material is endless. The public doesn't see the work that goes into the preparation for a meeting."

Her years of work with the League of Women Voters trained her how to make studies and arrive at conclusions with all the available knowledge.

Despite her capabilities, she said, "I do expect to be a rather low-key commissioner until I have learned my way around."

She strongly believes in the overriding necessity to be willing to listen to both sides of a situation.

Open mind

"Keeping an open mind is something every member of the commission should share in common," said Foote. "Digging in and studying is not glamorous, but it's the only way to make the system work."

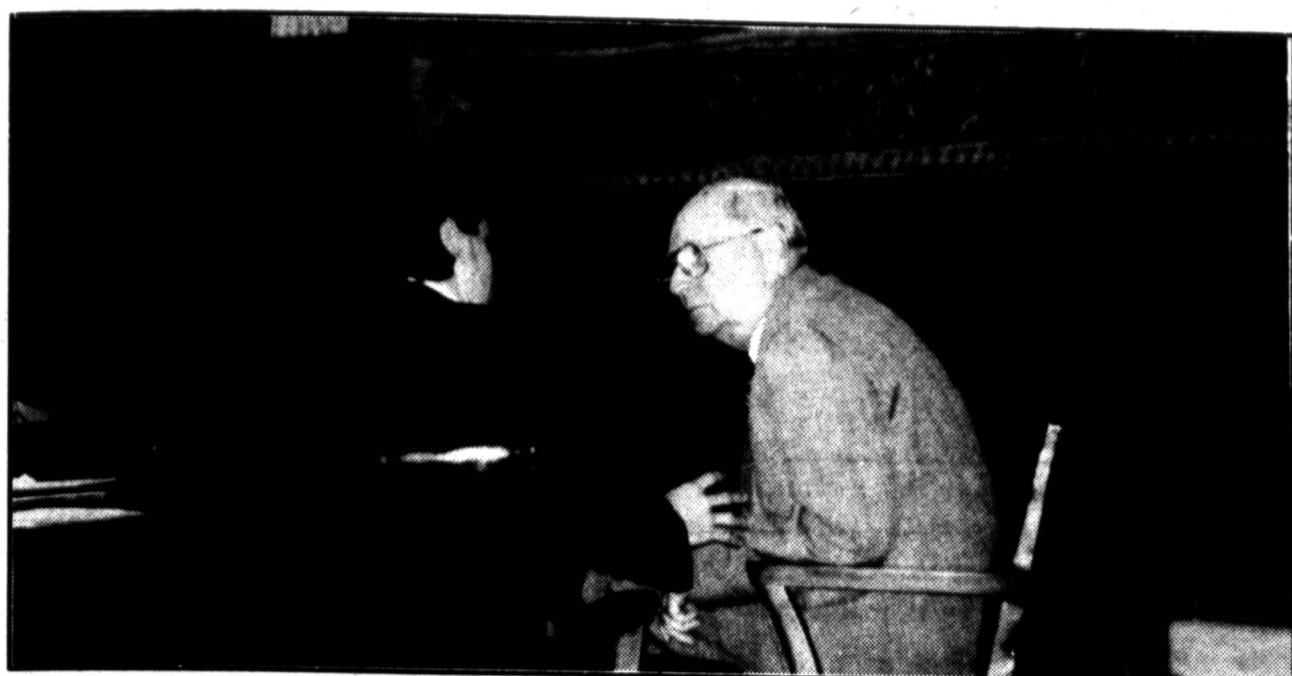

And when the system isn't working?

"The sunset clause seems to be a sensible way to let go of a situation that has lived out a natural life and needs to be finished," said Foote.

Jail not in his future, says Gates

DONALD GATES sat in the almost empty Monterey County Superior Courtroom yesterday waiting for his hearing to begin.

During the two and half hour wait he was heard to say, "I don't think there's a chance in hell that they will send me to jail."

Gates, the owner of the Cachagua Mutual Water Co., was in court to determine whether he had complied with court orders to bring the water system up to code set by the Monterey County Health Department.

One Jan. 26 he was sentenced to 90 days in prison for violation of his probation. But Superior Judge William Wunderlich suspended Gates' sentence until Jan. 10.

After one hour of cross-examination, the now presiding Judge William D. Curtis broke for lunch.

Due to The Carmel Pine Cone's deadline, further coverage was not possible.

Doris Day's Best Friends

By Doris Day

It's never too early to train your puppy

YEARS AGO, when dog training methods were fairly negative and sometimes harsh, it was commonly believed that a young puppy was too fragile and insecure to be "taught." By the time he was six months of age, when training usually began, the average dog had experienced plenty of negative learning. That meant he ignored his owner, was totally confused and had many bad habits.

We now know that puppies are like little sponges, ready and willing to learn. The ideal time to bring a puppy into your home is at seven weeks of age. This is the time when he begins to bond best and you can immediately begin teaching him desired behavior.

Between the ages of eight and 10 weeks the puppy goes through a stage called the fear imprinting period. He is just learning to trust and his fragile little ego can be damaged easily. Since it is about the time you'll be trying to housetrain, the correct approach is vitally important.

The third and fourth months of a puppy's life are called the socialization period and during this time it is crucial for puppies to receive proper socialization and training if they are to mature into calm, confident, well-rounded adults. They should have lots of positive exposure to a variety of strangers, other dogs and different environments.

Today the concept of puppy kindergarten is sweeping the country. It should be a gentle, positive approach to learning and problem prevention. I know I've talked about training more than once in the past few months. The reason is all those sad little faces, waiting in cages in animal shelters. Thousands and thousands are euthanized because they have become uncontrollable, temperamental, aggressive, anti-social, fearful, nervous or "untrainable" adults.

If your family includes a puppy — or if you plan to adopt one in the future — please take the time to attend a reputable training class. The National Association of Dog Obedience Instructors is interested in improving dog obedience training and instruction. For information about this organization or the name of the NADOI instructor nearest you, contact Gwen Coon, corresponding secretary, 2286 E. Steel Road, St. John, MI 48879. Give your puppy a chance to be the best he can be!

Greg Brown coming to the Masters

STILL DOWN under in Australia, I had another culinary adventure thanks to Highlands Inn's general manager, David Fink, who recommended that I look up Greg Brown at Browns restaurant just outside of Melbourne. David said that he is one of the guest chefs coming to the Masters of Food & Wine this year, actually at the end of this month, Feb. 23-28.

Browns is really a joint effort between Greg and his lovely wife Merran who designed the interior that so aptly reflects and showcases her husband's craft in this dual ambience restaurant. Bistro in the front with french doors that open to the sidewalk for extra dining during good weather and intimate and elegant dining room(s) in the back, reminiscent of 16th century French Chateaus. When I met them they were due to be parents and very excited to be coming to Carmel.

Charming and informative

Browns opened in 1990 and received "Restaurant of the Year" award after only being opened for six months. Greg, in his early 30s, is renowned as one of Australia's finest award-winning chefs who, besides running Browns, also holds cooking classes in Melbourne, Sydney and Perth, along with writing newspaper and magazine articles. I coincidentally saw him doing a cooking demo on TV while in my hotel room, just before going to the restaurant that evening. He was charming and informative.

Greg's education did not start out in a culinary direction during his university days, but in politics and psychology. However, still in his 20s, he began his gastronomic career by working in some of Australia's finest restaurants, then went abroad for four years and studied with the famed Raymond Blanc of the 'Manoir aux Quatre Saisons,' then at the 'Waterside Inn' with Michel Roux and at 'Ecole Lenotre' in Paris, famous worldwide for its patisserie and boulangerie (pastries and baked goods). On returning to Australia, Greg opened his first restaurant 'Paysan' in Melbourne in 1987. This proved to be a resounding success with the critics naming it "Restaurant of the Year" two years running. After two and one-half years, Greg recognized the need for growth, and in 1990 moved to the current location at 1097-1111 High Street in Armadale just outside Melbourne. As I mentioned earlier, he and Merran have two restaurants in one concept that works quite well along with 'Browns Bakery and Pastry' that they opened in May.

Unique menu items

Greg's adaptation of his European training to the Australian products has created the attention, recognition and numerous awards that have come his way. Listed below are a sample of some of his unique menu items — A Confit of Pigeon with Pigs' Trotters, Braised Mushrooms and a Ginger & Star Anise Essence; A Galette of Salted Almond & Duck Liver Mousse and a tiny Salmon & Crème Fraiche Pizza; Oysters in a Watercress & Spinach Butter; Roast Saddle of Hare with Artichokes "Barigoule" and Cipriani Pasta; 'Crystal' of Salmon cooked gently in Goose Fat and served on a Piperade, dusted with flaked Salt; Herbed Soup of Vegetables with Tarragon, Chervil & Sweet Zucchini Water; Seared Sweetbreads with Fillet of Rabbit, Yabbies and Glazed Vegetables; Scallops in a Vermouth and Truffle Milk, scented with Fennel Seed; and desserts such as Wattleseed & Chocolate Truffarde on a Wattleseed Sauce; Caramelized Gingered Pears with Honey Ice Cream.

I enjoyed his cuisine immensely and hope some of you will be able to meet Greg at the Highlands Masters this month.

The rains came, but no wet blankets at Pebble

DESPITE THE rain, there were no wet blankets at the 1993 AT&T Pebble Beach National Pro-Am Golf Tournament.

If fact, one would need a rather sour disposition not to enjoy the AT&T.

While the mood at the AT&T provided its usual mixture of seriousness laced with frivolity, the overall feeling, unlike last June's U.S. Open, was not tense.

For the past 46 years, professional golfers along with their celebrity sidekicks, have been entertaining the crowds. Whether a serious-minded golf buff, or just a person who wants a close-up look at a star, the AT&T provides nothing but sheer pleasure.

Jack Lemmon, star personified, caught the interest of both golf enthusiasts and star gazers. He has played in the tournament for decades when it was simply known as "The Crosby."

With great determination, Lemmon has earnestly tried to make the three-round cut over the years, but has failed some 21 years in a row. Last year, he was short by one stroke. This year — well — it just didn't happen.

Obviously, the situation was heartfelt, but Lemmon kept his wits about him.

The day before he knew for sure that he wouldn't be playing on Sunday, his pro-partner Peter Jacobsen offered a bit of professional advice on the 13th tee at Spyglass Hill.

Jacobsen suggested that Lemmon hit his drive just to the left. Lining up the ball, Lemmon said sarcastically, "Are there any other instructions?"

He listened to Jacobsen, though, and ended up lying three, just 10 feet from the hole.

THIS YEAR'S AT&T tournament was an all-time success with more than $1 million in ticket sales alone. And equally successful was the invitation-only Pebble Beach Co. Brunch on Sunday.

Bill Delong, catering manager, offered up an array of wonderful dishes to choose from including an incredible crab-stuffed pasta.

From beginning to end, the third fairway tent at Pebble Beach was full with a myriad of personalities.

Without any fanfare, the owner of Pebble Beach Co., Masatsugu Takabayashi, arrived alone. He flew in from Japan to enjoy the event and was delighted with the turnout commenting that it was wonderful that more than 45,000 people had attended the tournament on Saturday.

Pebble Beach Co. President Tom Oliver was all smiles. He attributed part of the high attendance to this year's U.S. Open, adding that everything was going very well.

Tom Gray, managing partner of Rancho San Carlos, was impressed with Donald Trump's golfing, and thoroughly enjoyed Bill Murray's golf-side banter.

One of the owners of Carmel Valley's Quail Lodge, Ed Haber, was more impressed with John Daly. "He hits the ball farther than I do," cracked Haber. "When he got to the hole on the 18th in two, I gave my clubs away. They were the most spectacular shots I've ever seen."

Local politicians were out and about enjoying the day.

Carmel Mayor Ken White and his wife, Jean, greeted just about everyone that passed by their table.

Monterey County Supervisors Karin Strasser Kauffman, Barbara Shipnuck and Sam Karas were mingling among the crowd.

It's hard to say whether any of them were discussing the fine points of golf, but it's hardly any question that they were fine tuning the public for votes in June.

The election will be the highlight this June since there will be no U.S. Open at Pebble Beach in 1993.

It will be another year before golf and celebrity fans will once again have a chance to see their favorites in action.

The Natural History Report

By Craig Hohenberger

The importance of biodiversity and habitat preservation

THE PRIMARY cause of disappearing biological diversity is not from direct human exploitation of the earth, but more from habitat destruction resulting from an ever-increasing human population and its associated activities. To keep up with the accelerated depletion of the earth's habitats, scientists are mobilizing quickly to classify and catalog as many of the remaining undescribed life forms as possible.

We are fortunate to live in California, one of the most biologically diverse regions in the world. Within the State's 160,000 square miles, there are more unique plants and animals than in any other state. California's biodiversity is directly related to climate variation and geographical barriers, such as our deserts, rivers, and mountains. For millions of years, these physiognomic features have acted as migrational barriers for species, resulting in isolated gene pools, which further augmented California's speciation. For example, there are approximately 30,000 species of insects, 590 birds, 46 amphibians, 96 reptiles, 63 freshwater fishes, 190 mammals, and 8,000 plants in California.

"Of special concern"

However, with the rapid decline of our wetlands, riparian forests, grasslands, and old growth forests, over 20 percent of our naturally occurring plant and animal species are now classified as endangered, threatened, or "of special concern" by the state and federal governments.

The biodiversity concept inherently means, "variety of life." However, this simplistic definition fails to fully describe the complexity, time, and spiritual value involved with the evolution of the planet. Our environment characterizes an amazing choreographic display of life, representing millions of years worth of physical and biotic interactions. Genes, the "hereditary vehicles of life," carry the survival history of nearly 3500 million years from these ecological interactions. When a species disappears, its "genetic history" is lost forever.

However, this process of extinction has occurred naturally for millennia. Species extinction resulting from natural selection (survival of the fittest, and other selective forces) does not necessarily upset the evolutionary balance of nature. But, when Homo sapiens indiscriminately and inadvertently destroy millions of acres of habitat annually, thousands of species often perish before evolutionary forces have time to shape their genetic survival makeup. The result from this relentless habitat destruction and loss of life, ultimately leaves physical and biotic voids in the biosphere. To save our earth's habitats and biodiversity, we must augment our environmental research and educational knowledge before we pass the "threshold of evolutionary no return."

Global environmental perturbations

The Ventana Wilderness Sanctuary Research and Education Center at Andrew Molera State Park has implemented numerous research and education projects to catalog, monitor, restore and preserve habitats for species classified as endangered, threatened, or of "special concern" in the Park. Presently, we are monitoring migrant and resident birds of Molera Park to determine if behavioral and demographic changes may be occurring from global environmental perturbations and habitat destruction.

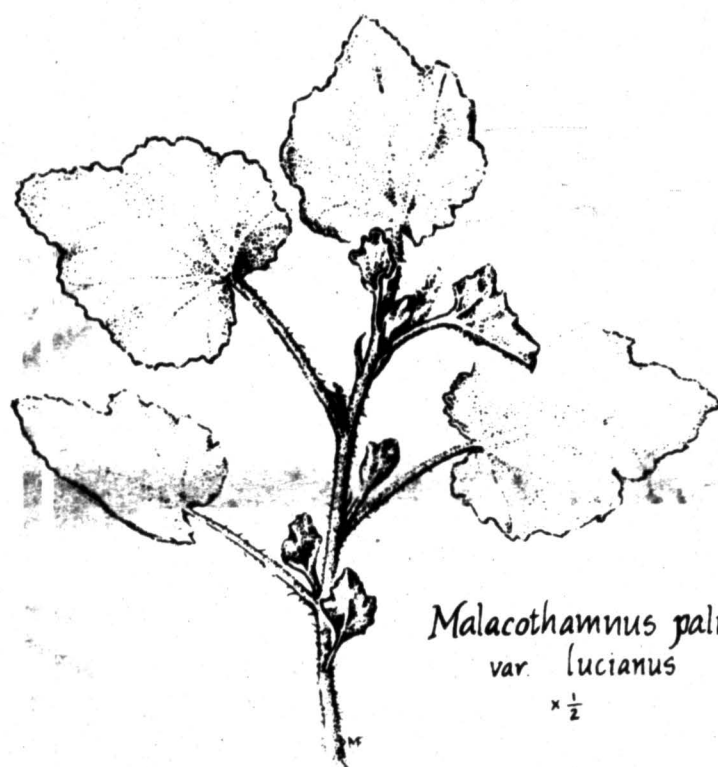

Along with our avian research programs, we are initiating a Habitat Restoration Project. Soon, we will begin collecting a variety of seeds from local native plants to propagate and grow in one of our proposed greenhouses at the Research and Education Center. The plants grown in the greenhouses, will represent the "genetic stock" of central coast native plants for use in habitat restoration projects at Molera and other State Parks. In fact, we hope our restoration project will act as a model for habitat protection on the central coast. In addition, we want the Habitat Restoration Project to be an educational and interpretive source for the community in native plant propagation and landscaping techniques.

Padre Sports Review

By James Genone

Successful Season So Far For Padre Hoops

CARMEL HIGH, usually known for its success on the baseball diamond, is having an exceptional year on the basketball court. The Padre boys basketball team has moved into sole possession of second place with a wins over P.G., Gonzales, and league-leading Alisal. The JV boys are half a game out of first place, and the freshmen are improving as well. In addition, Carmel's lady hoopsters are currently in second place, one game behind Notre Dame and King City, following wins against P.G., Santa Catalina, Alisal, and a loss to Gonzales.

After important wins over Palma and RLS two weeks ago, the boys basketball team traveled to P.G. two weeks ago to face the Breakers, who were tied with them for second place going into the game. The Breakers led in the first quarter 11-6, but the Padres went up at half by one point, 19-18. The game was close until the end, but the patient Carmel offense was the story, as the Padres won in a low-scoring affair, 37-31. On offense, R.J. Powell carried the load, scoring 18 and grabbing six rebounds.

The Padres had that Friday off, and then resumed play last Tuesday against first place Alisal. This was a must-win game for the Padres, if they wanted a chance at the league title. The game was close until Carmel pulled away with a 34-point outburst in the fourth quarter, and won by the score of 76-59. R.J. Powell had an amazing game, scoring 34 points, two of which included a thundering two-handed dunk as time ran out. Jason Lindgren scored 14 points and pulled down six rebounds, Nate Stiles added 12 points and 12 boards to go along with his seven assists, and Dean Wilson poured in 11 for the Padres.

Then last Friday Carmel got a little revenge against Gonzales, who nipped the Padres early this season. The Padres led the whole way, and finished with a 62-52 victory. Nate Stiles led the team with 16 points and six boards, R.J. Powell scored 13 while grabbing eight rebounds, Jason Lindgren tossed in 12 points and pulled in eight boards, and Dean Wilson added nine points and five assists.

"Everyone is slipping into their role, and we're playing real well as a team," said Coach Frank.

This week the Padres face the always dangerous Pirates of RLS and Chieftains of Palma.

Girls' Basketball

Not to be outdone by their male counterparts, the Carmel girls scored three important wins to hold onto second place in the MTAL with a 7-3 record (16-5 overall).

Playing at home two weeks ago on Tuesday, the girls outgunned P.G. in a 57-35 shelling of the out-womaned Breakers. Doreen Evans led the way with 14 points, and Carmel's two Erins, Kraft and Murray, scored 13 and 10 points respectively. Jen Rosenthal and Jamie Aldrich each added six points to help the Padres.

Then on Friday the Padres traveled to Santa Catalina, and the whole team got into the action as Carmel scored a 43-29 win. Doreen Evans led the way with 13 points, and Erin Kraft and Jen Rosenthal each added six.

Last Tuesday the Padres moved into a brief tie for first with Notre Dame and King City, after annihilating Alisal 72-34. The whole team contributed to the 38-point win; Doreen Evans and Jen Rosenthal each scored 13, and Megan Martine added 11.

The Padres finished off last week with a tough loss to Gonzales, 60-54. Jen Rosenthal led Carmel with 12 points, and Doreen Evans, Erin Kraft, and Megan Martine each scored eight.

Boys' JV Basketball

Despite limited press coverage, the Padre JV hoopsters have turned in an incredible performance so far this year, and are currently in second place, half a game back from Palma with a 6-2 league record (11-8 overall). The Padres, who didn't expect to be this competitive this year, are surprised to find themselves performing so well.

"I didn't know we'd be playing as well as we are at this point," said head coach Mike Woodie.

Coach Woodie has a variety of talented players at his disposal, and makes good use of them all. Leading the team is sophomore point-guard Dustin Nagai. Nagai averages almost seven assists per game, and is scoring around 15 points in each league outing. At the other guard spot, junior Justin Kopel is the team's leading scorer. This three-point threat averages around 16 points per game, and has had four or five 20-plus point outings. Sophomore center John Geisler, who, as many may remember, doubles as the varsity football team's starting quarterback, leads the team in rebounding. Averaging around 12 boards per game, Geisler is probably the league's leading rebounder, and is always a threat to score down low. Sophomores Juan Cortina and Erin Gaily start at the two forward spots, and both contribute balanced play at both ends of the floor, with Cortina averaging nearly nine rebounds a game.

All in all, the Padres have been very successful so far this season, and look to keep the intensity up in the second half.

"I wouldn't be surprised," said coach Woodie. "We could win it."

Father Farrell's Wisdom

Fear is a low motive, but it is effective

ONCE ON the bridge of a Norwegian freighter bound for Manila, the Captain observed that "there are no atheists in fox holes." I'm sure that is true; but there are none on ships at sea either. He then quoted from the 107th Psalm: "They that go down to the sea in ships that do business in great waters. These see the works of the Lord and His wonders in the deep." (The modern translators of the Bible have really worked over this psalm to its detriment as they have done to the beloved and poetic 23rd The Lord Is My Shepherd.)

In life, we encounter frequent storms, squalls, and rough seas as we sail from launching to beaching. We suffer from physical, mental and spiritual turmoil. We are subjected to anxiety, fear, depression and confusion. Often, we take out our frustrations on our families and friends.

Like the captain in a storm who waits too long to call for help because he fears that he might lose his ship or its cargo to salvage, we show our false pride and misplaced independence; however, a call for help shows that we believe that the Lord is watching and that He has the power to rescue us.

There is a price to pay; we have to give up our selfishness and tell him we will keep His laws. How huge do the waves have to be, how fierce the winds, how near the rocks before we are willing to cry out "Lord, help us, we perish."

A philosopher once said that fear is the lowest of all motives but no one can deny that is the most effective. Amen.

In Salinas, the test is offered 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesdays at the Health Department, 1270 Natividad Road. For an appointment, call 755-4512.

Evening testing is available 6 to 9 p.m. Tuesdays at the Salud para la Gente Clinic, 10 Alexander St., downtown between East Beach and East Lake streets, Watsonville. For an appointment, call 728-0222.

Meals on Wheels needs volunteers

DRIVERS AND other volunteers are needed to deliver 250 meals daily to shut-ins and the handicapped on the peninsula for Meals on Wheels.

According to Chuck Poland, a Carmel volunteer, 280 homes are served with three meals five days a week from Carmel Valley to Marina, but 25 volunteer drivers are needed daily to deliver those meals.

Each shut-in is delivered a breakfast, one cold meal (usually a sandwich, salad and juice), and one hot meal. He added that volunteers are also needed to prepare meals at the Meals on Wheels facility at 700 Jewell Ave. in Pacific Grove.

The agency also serves lunch to about 75 seniors at the facility every day. If you would like to volunteer to help out, contact Meals on Wheels at 375-4454.

Meals on Wheels is a non-profit organization.

The Golden Years

By Myles Williams

At age 81, researcher Jacques Cousteau was still thinking big, and long-term. His work included planning for a marine laboratory ship large enough to carry a helicopter, hydroplane and mini submarine. The design called for it to be powered by wind turning propellers in a "turbosail" tower. His goal was to complete the ship by 1996 — to mark his 85th year.

A Census Bureau study provides some insights into financial support Americans give to relatives who do not live with them. Based on 1988 data, the Bureau found eight million Americans spent $24 billion to help support 12 million others. Almost half supported children under 21. Forty-five percent supported adults, and 6 percent both adults and children. Of those supporting adults only, 61 percent were age 45 or older and 42 percent were women.

Remember When? August 7, 1964 — After reports of a clash between North Vietnamese gunboats and U.S. warships in the Gulf of Tonkin, Congress authorized President Johnson to build up U.S. forces in Vietnam.

BIGTIME COMMUNICATIONS INAUGURATES NEW OFFICE SUITE

The BigTime Inaugural Ball held at the new office suite at 206 Fountain Ave., Pacific Grove, Jan. 20, attended by over 100 of Monterey Peninsula's advertising, media and creative folk was a celebration of new beginnings from the Potomac to Pacific Grove. The party was to announce the merger of Greg Frederick Productions and Peri International to form BigTime Communications. BigTime provides communication services including all aspects of audio, video and film production, copy writing for print materials, public relations and special events. BigTime's extensive client base includes governmental, non-profit and educational agencies, corporate and hospitality accounts and provides services for advertising agencies.

Some of BigTime's latest projects have included an educational, Prop 99 funded, video for the Monterey County Office of Education to teach students Refusal Skills for Tobacco "How to Say No and Keep Your Friends" with Mr. Time Guy. Mr. Time Guy is a magical character with powers to start and stop time in order to allow kids another chance to handle peer pressure situations with their newly learned negotiation skills.

Video crime re-creations and forensic audio services produced by BigTime Communications have been instrumental in the convictions in the Ward murder case for the Monterey County District Attorney's Office.

Why BigTime? Says partner Peri Basseri, "We like our clients to feel as though they have reached the Big Time right here on the Monterey Peninsula. For the most part, there's no need to leave the area for high-end creative work. The majority of what people need here can be found close to home. We do have relationships with facilities in the Bay Area for specific technical needs."

Foster care families needed

The Office of Community and Children's Services needs homes willing to share their families with children who need an alternative home—whether it be for six months or the whole year - while family reunification services are offered, or eventually a permanent home. Almost every currently licensed foster home is filled, the office reports. For information about fostering or adopting a child, call 899-8061 or 755-4660.

Señor Boronda, his wife and their fourteen kids decided that the cheese which they made here in 1864 was the perfect topping for the Ranch Chicken Quesadilla, served with our own selection of baby greens and choice of dressing.

Fresh Local Catch.....$12.95
In the early 1920's Sicilians spent the fishing season in Monterey. Many of them became permanent residents, and have passed on some of their most flavorful recipes used for the Fresh Local Catch - either from the ocean or from one of the rivers. (Ask your waitperson for our daily selection.)

Hearty Venison Stew.....$11.95
Whilst staying at the Old Grand Del Monte Hotel, Sam Morse used to catch game in Carmel Valley. Los Laureles was the place where the party met before and after the hunt. Deer, wild boar, and wild turkey were on the menu. To satisfy this hungry bunch, the chef prepared this Hearty Venison Stew with vegetables and dumplings.

Quarter Pound Grilled Hamburger.....$6.95
Italians and Mexicans agreed that this juicy Quarter of a Pound Grilled Hamburger needed their culinary attention. A savory focaccia bread and a zesty guacamole will accompany this American tradition; also available: bacon and Swiss (forgive them, Señor Boronda!)

JACOB'S PILLOW'S MEN DANCERS

THE TED SHAWN LEGACY

PERFORMANCE CARMEL, contemporary series designed by City Cultural Director Brian Donoghue, will offer a rare dance event at Sunset Theater.

Appearing there at 8 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 13, will be Jacob's Pillow Men Dancers: The Ted Shawn Legacy.

Says the announcement: "It's a stellar cast — nine of this country's finest male dancers drawn from premiere ensembles, on a one-time tour, in repertory for and about men."

Single tickets ($12 and $14.50) are available at Sunset Center during regular business hours. For group purchases or charge orders, call 624-3996.

Misconceptions

"Social prejudices and misconceptions have surrounded men in American modern dance since its beginnings," the announcement from Donoghue's office adds. "Ted Shawn, the founder of Jacob's Pillow — America's oldest and most prestigious dance festival — was the first to raise these issues which continue to resonate in the works of contemporary choreographers."

Jacob's Pillow Dance Festival and the members of Men Dancers dedicate this performance to Monterey County AIDS Awareness Week — Feb. 13-21 — as well as to dancers who have lost their lives to AIDS.

Seen will be Shawn's Kinetic Molpai (1935), remounted here for the first time in 20 years. The repertory also includes Jose Limon masterwork The Unsung (1970); Stephen Petronio's Surrender 2 (1989); Pilobolus' athletic Ocellus (1972); The Garden Alone by Demetrius Klein (1989); Garth Fagan's Oatka Trail (1979) and the offbeat Brides of Frankenstein (1990) by Rick Darnell.

Strong group

The cast features Gary Lund (also the project's tour director), Michael Loring, former Limon Dance Company member Yoav Kaddar, Peter Kope of Dance Alloy and Mark Taylor and Friends, Anthony Phillips from Robin Becker and Company, repertory veteran Anthony Roberts, Edward Akio Taketa from Lar Lubovitch Dance Company, Twyla Tharp and Limon veteran Gordon White, Boris Willis out of the Liz Lerman Dance Exchange.

The project's artistic director is Robby Barnett, co-director of Pilobolus.

Ancient Chinese art hub of local lecture

A VISUAL presentation and lecture on Feng Shui, the ancient Chinese art of environmental arrangement, will be offered at 7:30 p.m. Monday, Feb. 15, at Portofino Coffee House in Pacific Grove.

Appearing there and then will be Thomas Howes, general contractor who specializes in Feng Shui design consultation. (He studied with acknowledged Master Lin Yun.)

The art "can be used by anyone to improve the energies in home and workplace," program notes say. Admission: $5.

On Saturday and Sunday, Feb. 20-21, Howes will conduct workshops at York School. To learn costs and make reservations, call 372-2173.

Comic strip kids set to music

THE WHARF Theater in Monterey opens its new season at 8:30 p.m. Friday, Feb. 12, with the popular family musical You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown.

Then the show will play weekends through April 4, the Sunday matinees starting at 2 p.m. Call 649-2332 or 372-1373 for ticket information.

Directed by Gina Welch-Hagen (Angelo Di Girolamo produces), Charlie Brown has this cast:

Dustin Benton (title role), Sara McChesney (Snoopy), Bonnie Sky Suval (Lucy), Alexander Cardinale (Schroeder), Vincent Cardinale (Linus), Malia Garcia (Peppermint Patty), Ashley Brewer (Woodstock).

Kimberly Lewis (Lily), Jason Miles (Pig Pen), Sara Handy (Marcie), Angela Savage (Sally), Katie Craft (Little Redhead Girl), Kristin Guy (Clara), Carolyn Rees (Violet).

THE STEINBECK Foundation announces a one-man show honoring the Nobel author's birth anniversary.

James Nisbet Clark will appear in John Steinbeck: A Quest of Genius at 8 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 27. Curtain time will be preceded by a 7:30 reception.

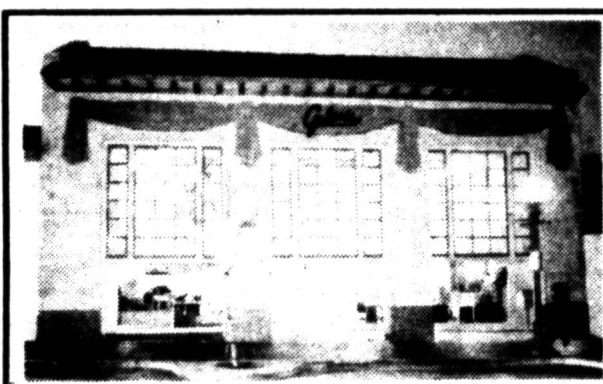

Site: the newly-restored Fox California Theater in the heart of Oldtown Salinas. Ticket sales ($15 each) will benefit the foundation.

Information: 753-6411.

THE OPENING of A Room of One's Own at Cherry Hall in Carmel has been postponed until April 23.

First curtain had been scheduled for last Friday. Director Nick Zanides decided he needed more time to recover from recent surgery.

The one-woman show will star Marlie Avant as writer Virginia Woolf.

Russian pianist fails to please in Carmel concert

By LYN BRONSON

THERE WAS a time when to be a Soviet-trained pianist was a formidable credential in itself. The Soviet system of recognizing talent in even the most remote corners of the USSR and making provision to move families to Moscow, find them new jobs and better homes so that their gifted children could enjoy the benefits of the Central Music School and the Moscow Conservatory, produced extraordinary results.

One of the great Soviet successes of the Cold War was the string of first-rate instrumentalists who placed in the top ranks of world class competitions. The Soviet Union had its own internal competitions to select the most gifted to represent the USSR, and in addition used its Ministry of Culture to provide concert tours to further season these artists in anticipation of their participation in foreign competitions.

At the Queen Elizabeth of Belgium Competition in Brussels in the early 1950s, American entrants arrived the week of the competition and practiced around the clock desperately trying to whip themselves into shape for the grueling event. It did not escape their notice that the Soviet contestants were so well prepared and seasoned that they were passing the time playing table tennis. And everywhere the magnificent Soviet pianists won well-deserved recognition and awards.

Accordingly the prestige of Soviet pianists has been elevated into a magical mystique. Until recently, that is, for since the collapse of Communism in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union, the floodgates have opened and our shores invaded by a new breed of emigre Russian pianist. They are not an elite, internally selected by the Soviet system, nor have they distinguished themselves in international competitions. They are, however, still coasting on the prestige of being a "Russian" pianist.

Ratser cited

One such pianist, Dimitri Ratser, appeared as soloist with the Monterey County Symphony last weekend playing the Brahms Second Piano Concerto.

Ratser does not have a distinguished background or track record compared to such newly emerged young artists as Andrei Gavrilov or Yevgeny Kissin, nor is he represented on any recordings readily available in the United States. Actually, it really wouldn't matter a bit, if his performance were on a high, artistic level.

Unfortunately, it has to be said that at last Sunday's performance in Sunset Center, Ratser's playing was sadly lacking. He was scrambling desperately just to play the notes of the Brahms Concerto. Passages were smudged, rhythms were fudged and ugly sounds abounded as he banged his way insensitively through some of the most beautiful music ever written for piano and orchestra.

There were a few occasional flashes of elegant, sensitive playing. One such moment was in the first movement's retransition to the recapitulation and another was some lovely playing in the slow movement.

First seconds

These moments were few and far between. When a pianist sits down to play, you can always tell in the first 10 seconds whether the artist has the attitude, "I am a virtuoso and am going to amaze you with my technique" or "I love this beautiful and powerful music and would like to share it with you."

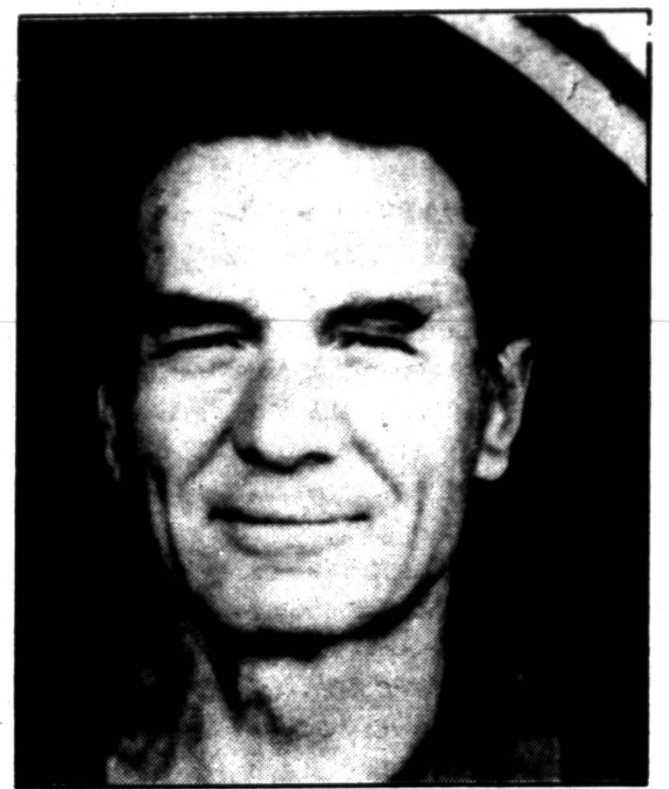

The problem with the first attitude is that the performer tends to play too loudly and too fast and constantly gets in the way of the music. If only Ratser could adopt this second attitude, there would be an instant improvement in his playing.

Otherwise....

Otherwise, the afternoon provided some very pleasing music. Maestro Suttle led the orchestra through a delightful performance of the Overture to the Merry Wives of Windsor by Otto Nikolai and a comparative novelty, George Whitfield Chadwick's Symphonic Sketches.

In the Chadwick, the orchestra hummed like a well-knit ensemble with everything falling into place: clockwork. There were beautiful solos by Concertmaster Philip Levy (in the ending of the Noel), bass clarinetist Joe Englert, oboist Bennie Cottone, hornist Phil Richardson and many others.

In the Brahms Concerto, Peter Gelfand, principal cello, rose to the occasion via the beautiful solo in the third movement.

Poet Kinnell set for Sunset date

MAJOR POET Galway Kinnell (see above photo), a favorite on the Monterey Peninsula, will return for a reading at 8 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 13, in Sunset Center's Carpenter Hall (Mission St. entrance).

His appearance is co-sponsored by Robinson Jeffers Tor House Foundation and Monterey Peninsula College English Department.

Kinnell has won the Pulitzer Prize, Shelley Prize and the American Book Award. He holds fellowships from the MacArthur and Guggenheim foundations.

Last year, his poem "The Man in the Hotel Room" was chosen by Editor Charles Simic to run in the anthology Best American Poetry of 1992.

Tickets to the reading may be bought at the door that night. Also, Kinnell will conduct a poetry workshop Feb. 13-14. This has been filled, but a waiting list is being taken by Laquita Vance-Walkins (624-5068).

Carmel's Bob Campbell pens show that's a true delight

By MATTHEW FRIDAY

FOR ONLY a couple of weeks, Carmel's Common Ground Theater is providing the young at heart with a rich blend of whimsy and talent in a musical — Mr. Pippie Popper's Pet Shop — at Carmel Ballet Academy.

Originally developed as a narrative collection of children's stories by award-winning Carmel mystery novelist Robert Campbell, the individual pieces have been woven into a mesmerizing whole with Brian Bennett's very original and satisfying musical score.

The story has Billy, played with much presence, precocity and style by young Aric Fullon, stepping "out the window, across the roof, down the apple tree and into the park" in a junket of "Delightful Disobedience—not!"

He brings his favorite Poppit, a full grown and colorfully costumed stuffed animal played with a mime's heartfelt sensibility by adult actress Susan Burns.

Together they will discover Mr. Pippie Popper's shop, a fantastic combination of "toy shop, pet shop and travel agency" — all doodads, geegaws and gadgetry, a working palace of switches, levers and lights streaming, flickering and whirling invitingly.

Another galaxy

It is intergalactic transportation (and possible time machine) for characters of another galaxy who, heroically, become the toys and stuffed animal friends of our own.

And it isn't long before fearful shadows, childhood's anxieties, find doubt and advantage in Billy's jaunt on the wild side.

They take the form of the villainous "Count of confusion...Snick" and sidekick "Galleywump...Snee," played with much foreboding by Peter Eberhardt and Diane Hilts, respectively. (And to wary believability among the children in the front row).

These two are less interested in Billy than Poppit, because, like Poppit and Billy, they too are distractedly far from home.

Laura at helm

Laura Akard directs an imaginative and personable cast through an hour or so of wonder, words, warmth and more action than a pinball—far less video—machine. Very subtly British, with creative, rhyming wordplay (faintly reminiscent of Lewis Carroll), "catching unsuspecting adjectives for use in birthday poems," the cast (including Eddie Clark's plump and mainly loveable Elephump) held the children spellbound, mouths agape, intent, and jiggle-free in their seats. In fact, the only one "squirmy and smarmy" in the place was Snick.

Billy, Poppit, Snick and Snee will find their way to the shop and its secrets; the latter three, with Gerkil, Zylot, Poppit, and the magic of Alpha Centauri, will go home in Mr. Popper's wonderfully unfolding, intergalactic transporting machine — and where does that leave Billy?

Mr. Popper saves the day in a clever twist, like "turning lions into kittens," and Billy, growing up a bit, will not go home friendless.

It's a terrific set, ambitious lighting, lots of fun and a mature script. (Though the ending does seem less definitive than the rest of the show, that might be appropriate at fantasy's edge).

Highly recommended. Mr. Pippie Popper's Pet Shop at the Carmel Ballet Academy, 8th and Mission, Saturdays at 8 p.m., Sundays at 2 and 7 p.m. through Feb. 28.

Tickets are $8, $6 and $4. Call 655-3200 for information.

Jazz Tides

By John Detoro

Michelle backs off

JAZZ PIANIST Michelle Petruccianni has cancelled his March 2 gig at Spanish Bay. So says producer Richard Armbrust.

"He got a chance to appear right then on Jay Leno's TV show," Richard adds. "We're still working with Michelle on a future date."

Meanwhile, the band for Richard's Thursday night (2/11) dance at Mission Ranch is Swing Time with Alan Berman and Don Pendergrass. Info: 455-2292.

IT WILL be my big fun to start a new show Saturday (2/13) at Carmel's KRML Jazz Radio. That's 1410AM and I'll be on-air weekly from noon till 3 p.m.

WRITER BILL Minor informs that IDEA (International Disabled Exchange Adventures) has an interest in the International Jazz Party at the Hyatt Regency Monterey. The free public concert will happen Thursday night (2/11).

The non-profit organization provides international cultural exchange between this country and Japan for persons with disabilities, personal advocates and "professionals in disability-related fields," volunteer media rep Minor says. "IDEA will be selling Jazz Party memorabilia to raise funds to send our travel candidate — MPC student Chris Wenner — to Japan this March."

Brought together by trumpeter Bill Berry and his wife Betty, the lineup includes Japanese clarinet star Eiji Kitamura's sextet, vocalist Madeline Eastman, Berry, guitarist Bruce Forman, drum pro Vince Lateano, Jackie Coon Quartet, Rare Sounds Orchestra from Nagoya.

Local coordinator David Murray says the Japanese players, after performing with Berry in Los Angeles, insisted on coming here as a gesture of good will. "And because they love the Monterey Peninsula a whole lot."

MONTEREY BAY Hot Jazz Society will celebrate Valentine's Day with a y'all-come party Sunday (2/14) at the Moose Lodge in Del Rey Oaks. Time span: 1:30-5:00 that afternoon.

Spotlighted will be the group featuring Dick Duane on keyboards and tenorman Claude Gilroy. Frank Snyder's bass and Ben Randall (drums) complete that quartet.

Dancers welcome. It's $4 (members) and $6 (non-members). The regular jam session will happen too.

PIANO MAN Bobby Phillips announces a two-site event under the rubric Jazz Pianorama '93. Overlapping dates work out this way: March 5-6-7 at Monterey Hotel's Orleans Room and March 6-7 at Church of Religious Science in downtown Monterey.

Bobby says the first venue will have such pianists as Roger Kellaway, Chris Calabrese, Dick Hindman, himself, Gary Sage, Smith Dobson, Serena Underwood "and more" from 1-6 p.m. The second (evening) lineup will be Phillips, Calabrese, Kellaway, Sage, Andrew Fielding, Hindman.

Tickets are on sale at Do Re Mi Music. Info: 625-1850.

BIG SUR'S River Inn will offer singer and songwriter Jill Knight in a free concert on Sunday night (2/14). She does contemporary blues and folk tunes while accompanying herself on guitar.

A Los Angeles critic called her "the freshest talent seen in a long time." Knight has opened for Leo Kottke, Laura Nyro, Restless Heart.

Appearing at another River Inn Freebie on Saturday night (2/13) will be Big Sur Natives — several members of the knockout Barefoot Band.

IF YOU don't mind driving a bit, Ocean Aire Concerts will present a rich show at Watsonville Veterans Hall on Sunday night (2/14). The bill: Maria Muldaur (aglow with a new hit vocal album), her Blusiana Band, Anson Funderburgh and The Rockets with Sam Myers.

It's all called "the Swine Valentine's Soiree" and represents the "official Valentine's Day Party" of KPIG Radio. Reserved table ducats are $15 advance (Ticketmaster). General — $10 advance and $14 at the door.

Muldaur's hot package is Louisiana Love Call. Local bassist Dennis Murphy's in her touring band these days. Funderburgh's a Texas blues guitarlinger of wide repute. Myers comes on with gritty mouth harp.

KUUMBWA JAZZ Center of Santa Cruz will be dark on Monday night (2/15). But on Friday evening (2/12), you can hear the Nuclear Whales Saxophone Orchestra for only $5 per at the door.

By PAUL WOLF

THE SOVIET missiles are moving inexorably toward Cuba, about 90 miles from Key West, Fla., the setting of the comedy Matinee (seen at the Lighthouse Cinemas in Pacific Grove.)

The John Goodman character, an obsessed purveyor of sensational (understatement) creature features, makes lemonade of the lemon Armageddon is passing out. What better time to initiate "Rumble-Rama" to shake up movie theater patrons? And how about a mushroom cloud bursting onto the screen?

Gets ★★★

"They'll never know," he proclaims in a key scene, "whether each malted milk ball is their last."

In fact, the challenge couldn't be greater: "You need a gimmick to scare people at such times," he admits. "A little something extra."

Besides being a good businessman, is Lawrence Woolsey (Goodman) psychotic or merely adaptive? In an insane world, no one can judge. And that is a key point the movie has to make.

Surely, many viewers, watching this picture three decades after the Cuban Missile Crisis, may see it as simply providing summertime fun in the dead of winter.

And there could be nothing wrong with that. That's exactly how Woolsey makes his living.

Goodman is the pandering Hitchcockian figure (actually based on B-level horror filmmaker William Castle). He has come to Key West to premiere his sci-fi thriller Mant, which is about a man turned giant insect from an overexposure to radiation.

Meanwhile, an assemblage of teenage characters, played by a set of capable, scarcely known young actors, is busy learning about love and growing up.

Rich treat

Director Joe Dante has served a rich treat, a movie of ambition and shrewdness. It may become a matter of opinion whether its strengths make up for its few but nagging flaws.

Lest the reader be misled, this is no black satire in the tradition of Dr. Strangelove. It is, rather, a coming-of-age story that shows ordinary lives against the extraordinary historical backdrop.

Yet like the 1964 nightmare comedy, also steeped in a Cold War setting, we see how blurred are the lines separating the real and the surreal.

Eventually the distinct plot lines intertwine, and the film becomes part comedy, part thriller, part director's memoir. When we finally watch Mant, Matinee offers its most hilarious and inspired moments, well worth the price of admission.

Sometimes Matinee is a tribute to moving-going itself, and thus it is a cousin of the internationally popular Cinema Paradiso. Dante's picture, however, works on more levels than that 1989 French-Italian work.

However, certain mistakes should have been avoided. The film takes too long to get up and running; the first hour should have been kept to 30 minutes.

Whether the blame lies with the director or scriptwriter Charlie Haas is hard to say, but too much labor goes into depicting air-raid drills, the wrestling for supplies in the market, and pervasive political debates. It's enough to show us the times without compulsive explaining, for a fantasy of this kind should remember always to tread lightly.

As expected, Goodman saunters through his role with the ease he displays in every episode of Rosanne. He's waded through many minor movie roles to shape himself into an unsuspecting star.

And look for more from the young quartet — Simon Fenton, Omri Katz, Lisa Jakub and Kellie Martin.

In a bittersweet valediction, Lawrence Woolsey tells the young Fenton character, "Keep your eyes open (during the scary parts)." The movie teaches us that this staring devotion to the screen allows us to avert our eyes from the real world's far worse inventions.

In Pursuit of Ideas: A Year in the Life of the University of California. Collins Publishers (San Francisco). 200 photos plus essays by Mark McNamara. 192 pages — 10"x14" and $45 clothbound.

WHEN THE University of California was founded in 1868, Dr. Henry Durant (its first president) frequently had to beg money to pay debts. He dodged bill collectors on the streets of Berkeley. This book will help folks understand just what their funds have provided and how fundamentally the school is integrated into our state's cultural, intellectual, social and economic future.

The photo spreads and text also track the university's pursuit of ideas. Will the "Batman of Riverside" help perfect manmade sonar? Why is a stockbroker cheerleading for a UCLA football team? Can marine biologists in San Diego solve some of the world's food shortages?

Photojournalists spent 12 months covering the system. They discovered what insiders might overlook — the people who make up the university can be as remarkable as their achievements. (UC has 20 Nobel laureates and 252 members of the National Academy of Sciences on its faculty. Their research goes on and on.)

The project became a logistical and diplomatic minefield — nine campuses, five teaching hospitals, 200 labs and research centers competing for space and attention.

Was dance more gripping than discourse? Surfing more spectacular than science? Would ethereal dancers in a UC/Santa Cruz sunset upstage astronomers at Lick Observatory?

Plans to follow the successful Day-in-the-Life formula by placing photographers in many different locations to shoot within a single 24-hour period were scrapped in favor of an evolutionary, "elapsed time" approach. UC had its own rhythm; photographers were assigned throughout the academic seasons.

"We wanted to make sure the book wasn't like others that have been done about universities in general," said UC Relations Officer Susan Shea, "because some of those are pretty boring. We wanted this to be a Collins book."

Result: a final product that does more credit to the university than its administrators hoped, its critics expected, or the publisher anticipated.

WHITNEY POETRY Scholarship Foundation (WPSF) announces a Poetry Rally from 1:30-4 p.m. Sunday, Feb. 14, at Portofino Coffee House in Pacific Grove.

The free event will feature an open reading and refreshments to help kick off WPSF's 1993 poetry contest.

That competition offers cash prizes and will have separate divisions for student and adult poets. Theme: Memories.

Full details may be obtained by writing to WPSF, 186 Country Club Gate Center, Pacific Grove 93950.

THE NOVEL took Jeff Torrington 30 years to write. The big news came a few days ago: he won one of Britain's most lucrative literary awards for Swing Hammer Swing. Worth $31,550, the Whitbread Prize will help — Parkinson's disease made Torrington quit his job in an auto plant.

UC/DAVIS PROF Charles Rick has developed the planet's most diverse tomato seed library — 2,000 varieties. (Chuck O'Rear photo from the book discussed above.)

CARMEL BOOK EMPORIUM

This fine bookshop emphasizes high quality and 60 sections (ultimately 100) and a big stone fireplace round which folks may browse contentedly. Management promises computerized ordering that assures "the best possible turnaround time."

Special attention is given to mysteries, creative writing, the lively arts — and of course the tops in contemporary fiction. Videos include such special contexts as Oscar-winning Best Pictures over the past 20 years. And PBS productions. And music tapes and CDs (local players too). Before long, Carmel Book Emporium will add a cafe — perfect meeting spot.

On Lobos Lane in The Crossroads (a few steps from Safeway). Open 10-6 Sunday/Thursday; 10-8 Friday/Saturday. 626-BOOK.

MONTEREY BAY COFFEEHOUSE BOOKSHOP

Opened by Estelle Cimino in November 1991, this downtown spot (472 Alvarado St.) has an airy and bright atmosphere that seems made for book lovers. "I've had a passion for books ever since I was a child," Estelle comments. Her caring can be seen in the full children's section, Arts, Self-Help, Business, Spiritualitydozens of well-stocked categories. And the audio department delights with best-sellers read by excellent performers. "I really believe people come into a bookstore on a quest," she continues. "It's gratifying to be able to help our customers find the treasures they are seeking." The comfy coffee shop serves light lunches and desserts in addition to a fine array of espresso drinks. For-sale music CD's and cassettes provide a soothing and relaxing background. Computerized ordering. Magazines galore. Ample parking in rear lot. Hours: 9-10 Monday-Thursday; 9-10:30 Friday, Saturday. And 10-8 Sunday. 647-1822.

PEPPER PLANT HOT SAUCE

It's not too hot and not too mild, this delicious California-style sauce that can put the fun back into eating familiar dishes. With its pickled peppers and secret recipe, the sauce has begun appearing in area restaurants and markets. (Some folks have actually switched restaurants in order to put Pepper Plant on their breakfast eggs.) Ask your favorite grocer and chef to order by calling the nearest distributor — Frank of Gilroy's Good Egg Co. at 1-842-7881. Postscript: Pepper Plant makes a great Bloody Mary. And there's a new, tasty variation — Pepper Plant Sauce with garlic added. Also Salsa BBQ Sauce and Seasoning Spice.

THE SAN JOSE FLEA MARKET

A thousand garage sales...a hundred farmer's markets...an international bazaar...a country fair...The San Jose Flea Market is Northern California's largest attraction. CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA
CITY COUNCIL
ORDINANCE NO. 93-04

AN ORDINANCE AMENDING SECTIONS 17.24.170, 17.24.180 AND 17.24.240 OF THE CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA MUNICIPAL CODE ESTABLISHING A SLIDING SCALE FOR FLOOR AREA RATIO AND SITE COVERAGE FOR LARGER LOTS IN THE R-I LAND USE DISTRICT

WHEREAS, P1-63 of the General Plan states, "Adopt design regulations that establish maximum limits on site coverage and floor area in order to preserve open space and avoid excessive mass and bulk. Establish provisions for a smaller ratio of allowable coverage and floor area on large sites and on sites constrained by environmental factors to preserve open space, vegetation, natural landforms and the character of surrounding neighborhoods;" and

WHEREAS, the Municipal Code establishes dimensional standards for the design of single family structures in the residential district; and
WHEREAS, these standards are intended to serve as limits to guide the expression of architecture within the community yet allow for creativity; and
WHEREAS, of the basic design standards adopted by the City, floor area ratio is one that is significant by its influence on total building bulk and mass.
WHEREAS, in 1990, the City established a sliding scale ratio of allowed floor area to site area and a maximum on total floor area of 3,500 square feet; and
WHEREAS, the sliding scale adopted for larger lots has been found inequitable and a disincentive for maintaining larger lot development; and
WHEREAS, on 23 September and 28 October 1992 the Planning Commission held a public hearing on proposed amendments to the FAR site coverage and open space requirements for larger lots; and
WHEREAS, the Planning Commission recommends approval of the proposed ordinance.
NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED THAT THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF CARMEL-BY-THE-SEA DOES:

Section One. The following amendments shall be made to Section 17.24.170 of the Municipal Code:

17.24.170 Floor Area Ratio.

A. Purpose. Limitations on the allowable floor area contained within all buildings on the R-I building site are established for the following purposes:

1. To equitably provide adequate living space for single-family dwellings on all legal building sites;

2. To assure that the overall bulk of all buildings on each site will be harmoniously related to the size of the building sites on which they are constructed;

3. To prevent out-of-scale developments that are inconsistent with the preservation of neighborhood character and open space;

B. Floor Area. Floor area shall be defined as the total combined gross area included within the surrounding exterior walls of all floors contained within all enclosed buildings on an R-I building site as measured at the exterior walls. Floor area shall include, but shall not be limited to, all floors of all enclosed habitable spaces within all buildings, finished basements, mezzanines, guesthouses, studios, garages, carports. Required parking supplied by means of a parking pad shall also be counted as floor area. (Ord. 90-08 2(part), 1990).

C. Allowable Floor Area. The allowable square footage of floor area is dependent on the size of the lot, site conditions and compliance with the design review objectives for the R-I Land Use District. (Ord. 90-08 2(part), 1990).

1. The limitations on floor area represent the maximum amount of floor space that can be constructed on lots with no physical constraints such as significant slopes, significant trees, unusual shape or difficult access. All proposed construction must still comply with the design objectives in Section 17.24.160 as determined by the Planning Commission, and on some lots the maximum floor area may not be achievable.

2. On sites of 4,000 square feet or less in area and with less than a 30% slope, the maximum floor area shall not exceed 45% of the size of the building site. The maximum allowable floor area for lots with a slope of 30% or greater shall be determined through the use permit process established in Section 17.46.040.F, but in no case shall the floor area exceed the limits established in this Section. (Ord. No. 91-13 1, 1991).

3. For sites between 4,000 square feet and 10,000 square feet, the maximum floor area shall be as calculated by multiplying the site area by the following formula: (Ord. 93-04 1(part), 1993).

0.45 - (Number of Square Feet Over 4,000 x 0.02) = Total Floor Area

Floor area ratios for common lot sizes can be found in the Table in Section 17.24.240.

4. For sites larger than 10,000 square feet the maximum floor area shall be as stated in the Table in Section 17.24.240 for the corresponding site area. For building sites of a size between two entries in the Table the maximum floor area shall be pro-rated using a straight, arithmetic projection between the two entries. (Ord 93-04, 1(part), 1993.)

5. The maximum allowed floor area on any building site 40,000 square feet or larger shall not exceed 6,000 square feet. (93-03 1(part), 1993.)

Section Two. The following amendments shall be made to Section 17.24.180 of the Municipal Code:

17.24.180 Site Coverage and Open Space

A. Purpose. Limitations on maximum allowable site coverage and minimum required open space are established for the following purposes: (Ord. 90-08 2(part), 1990).

1. To provide sufficient area on each building site for landscaping, open space and visual relief from structures;

2. To protect existing vegetation including the trees of the urban forest and to enhance the viability of the urban forest;

3. To ensure adequate percolation of rainfall into the soil thereby avoiding excessive erosion or runoff of water onto neighboring properties.

B. Allowable Site Coverage. (Ord. 90-08 2(part), 1990).

1. The allowable site coverage for R-I building sites of 4,000 square feet or less in size shall not exceed fifty-five percent (55%) of the total area of the building site.

2. For building sites between 4,000 square feet and 13,000 square feet, the allowable site coverage, expressed as a proportion of the total site, calculated by first dividing the allowed floor area by the site area and then adding an additional ten percent (10%) of the site area. (Ord. 93-04 2(part), 1993.)

3. For building sites larger than 13,000 square feet the maximum allowable site coverage shall be limited to thirty-nine percent (39%) of site area. (Ord. 93-04 2(part), 1993.)

4. The allowed coverage for common lot sizes can be found in the Table in Section 17.24.240.

5. An additional amount of site coverage of up to five percent (5%) of the site area that meets the following objectives may be allowed through the design study process:

a. Preserve significant tree(s) on the site; or
b. Allow for off-street parking that is setback from the public right-of-way an additional five percent (5%) of the site depth; or
c. Provide for permeable coverage that is well integrated within a landscape plan.

C. Site coverage is defined as the total ground area of a site occupied by any building or structure as measured from the outside of its surrounding external walls or supporting members and all site improvements that provide a barrier to water or result in covering the natural soil of the site. Site coverage shall include the following: (Ord. 91-10 1, 1991).

1. Buildings and structures.

2. Exterior structures such as stairs, arcades, bridges, atriums, solariums, swimming pools, and permanent structural elements protruding from buildings such as overhanging balconies, stories which overhang a ground level story, and covered carports.

3. Surfaces that provide a barrier to water or cover the natural soil including driveways, walkways, patios, decks, garden walls, and boardwalks.

4. Materials such as gravel, decomposed granite, bricks, paving stones, turf block and similar artificial soil treatments or coverings, unless in combination with a landscape plan approved by the Planning Commission.

D. Open Space Defined. Open space shall be those areas that are free of structures, paving or improvements other than landscaping from the ground upward to the sky. (Ord. 90-08 2(part), 1990).

E. Required Open Space (Ord. 90-08 2(part), 1990).

1. The minimum open space provided shall be at least 45% of the site area for all building sites 4,000 square feet or less in size. (Ord. 93-04 2(part), 1993.)

2. For building sites between 4,000 and 13,000 square feet in size, the minimum open space shall be the inverse of the allowable site coverage as calculated in Section 17.24.180.B.2. (Ord. 93-04 2(part), 1993.)

3. For sites larger than 13,000 square feet, the minimum open space shall be at least sixty-one percent (61%) of the site area. (Ord. 93-04 2(part), 1993.)

4. All of the area within required setbacks shall be retained as open space with the exception of that portion of a setback occupied by a driveway or by minimal walkways or pathways. All such improvements shall be counted as site coverage. Modifications to this standard may be authorized by the Planning Commission to provide additional flexibility for existing development or for creative design proposals. In granting approval for such modifications the Commission shall require an equivalent or greater amount of open space to be provided elsewhere on the site and shall find that the design meets all adopted objectives and guidelines for open space.

F. Exceptions to Site Coverage and Open Space Limits. The following improvements shall not be counted as site coverage:

1. Oriel windows with a minimum dimension of eighteen inches (18") above the floor may extend eighteen inches (18") beyond the structural support members of the exterior wall;

2. Arbors or arcades when not exceeding one hundred fifty (150) square feet in area and where the open spaces between the uppermost horizontal members is greater in width than the horizontal members used in construction;

3. Eaves, overhangs, overhanging balconies or portions thereof which project no more than thirty-six inches (36") from the face of the building.

G. Sites not meeting the open space, site coverage and parking standards as specified in this Section and Section 17.24.120 shall not be authorized to increase site coverage, decrease open space or add floor area. (Ord. 90-08 2(part), 1990).

Section Three. The following amendments shall be made to the chart appearing in Section 17.24.240 of the Municipal Code:
